FASTIDIOUS BANDIT SENT BACK TO FACE CHARGE OF MURDER

Certain Identification of Man Arrested at Family Hotel as Kansas City Outlaw Made by Woman.

$20,000 IN LOOT FOUND IN TRUNKS

Latest Prisoner Makes No Effort to Conceal Association and Clears Up Many Points for Detectives.

The fastidious young man who was arrested Friday night at the Windermere, a family hotel at Clara avenue and Delmar boulevard, was identified positively yesterday as Walter L. Majors, member of a desperate band of outlaws, and wanted in Kansas City, Mo., on a charge of killing a policeman and wounding two others in a revolver fight Sept. 5.

Certain identification, and the recovery of about $20,000 in stolen securities and stamps, followed the arrest yesterday of Mrs. C. W. Antoine, 25 years old, at the home of her sister, 1329 North Vandeventer avenue. The loot was taken from two trunks found there.

Mrs. Antoine apparently made no attempt to conceal her connection with Majors, and freely answered many questions put to her by detectives and United States Secret Service agents. She cleared up some points for the investigators.

Expecting Detectives.

The woman arrested with Majors at the Windermere, where they were living under the names, "Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Vanmyre," also was identified as Pauline Clarke of Kansas City. Mrs. Antoine was expecting the officers when they arrived yesterday afternoon.

"I thought you would be here, after what I saw in today's papers about Majors being arrested," she said. At the Federal building, where she was taken, she told the following story:

She recently was separated from her husband, a motion picture exhibitor in Kansas City. About Aug. 20, Pauline Clarks, whom she knew, introduced her to Walter Majors and his brother, Raymond, also a member of the gang, as traveling men who wanted company on a trip to St. Louis. Mrs. Antoine agreed to accompany the party.

Men Return to Kansas City.

The two couples, Walter Majors and Pauline Clarke, and Raymond Majors and Mrs. Antoine, registered at the Maryland Hotel here Aug. 21. About Sept. 1, the two men returned to Kansas City, leaving the women at the hotel.

Harry Truesdell's gambling house in Kansas City was robbed and "shot up" Sept. 5, and a desperate pistol fight followed in an alley, in which Raymond Majors and Edward Adams were seriously wounded and captured, Policeman Frank Gardner was killed, and Policemen John Ford and George Burns were wounded. Walter Majors returned to St. Louis in a few days, with his right arm in a sling, telling the women, Mrs. Antoine said, that he had sprained it. He said that his brother had been "unavoidably detained" in Kansas City. Raymond Majors was then under heavy guard in a hospital, and Walter's arm contained many shot from a police riot gun.

Sends Mysterious Trunks.

Majors announced that they must move, and Mrs. Antoine said she would go to her sister's home.

The brothers owned four trunks, two of which, Mrs. Antoine said, were always locked, the other two containing clothing. He said he would store the clothing at the home of Mrs. Antoine's sister, and two trunks were sent there. However, it was found yesterday, Major had sent the two mysterious trunks there, instead, and in them was found the loot.

It consisted of Liberty Bonds, treasury certificates, war savings certificates, county and township bonds, travelers' checks, and postage stamps. The $14,450 in Liberty Bonds were in 12 packages, each wrapped up in a Kansas City newspaper, each of which contained an account of the robbery. It appeared that each bundle was wrapped in the paper describing the robbery in which those bonds were stolen.

Traced by Marriage License.

Majors, as has been told, then went with the Clarke woman and rented an apartment at 5536 Pershing avenue, paying $100 for a month in advance, and giving their names as "Mr. and Mrs. Conroy, motoring from Chicago to Florida," and departed at the end of a week. They went to the Windermere.

At the Windermere were found the two remaining trunks, and in one of them was a marriage license issued at Clayton in June, 1917, to C. W. Antoine and Miss Fannie Cas-

WILSON WINS OVER WOMAN MEMBER OF G. O. P. COMMITTEE

Declares After Los Angeles Speech She Is for Treaty Without Reservations.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cali., Sept. 22.—President Wilson and his party left here at seven o'clock last night for Reno, Nev., where they are scheduled to arrive late this afternoon.

The President will speak at Reno tonight. His itinerary for the week will take him as far east as Memphis, Tenn., with stops at nine cities on the way.

Refreshed by a Sunday rest in Los Angeles, President Wilson begins today another strenuous week of speech-making that will almost complete his country-wide tour for the peace treaty.

During the afternoon Mr. Wilson saw the regional committee of the League to Enforce Peace and later made public a list of questions submitted by them regarding the treaty, together with his answers. The replies were a repetition of previous public statements answering similar questions placed before him during the last week.

With the league delegation was Mrs. Florence Collins Porter of Los Angeles, one of the five women members of the Republican national executive committee, who told the President that, although she had not been able previously to support the treaty without reservations, she had decided to do so after hearing Mr. Wilson's address at the dinner here Saturday night. Later she accepted membership on the League to Enforce Peace executive committee and announced officially that she favored immediate ratification of the treaty as it stands.

AUSTRIA ADMITS PLOT WITH KAISER IN 1914 FOR WAR

Vienna "Red Book" Fixes Guilt So Plainly That Not Even Pan-German Papers Attempt to Deny It.

WILHELM ADVISED AGAINST DELAY

Gave Assurance of Supporting Any Action, but Tried to Intervene When Serbia Accepted Demands.

By Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—After a long succession of revelations, denials, semi-confessions, perversions and hiding the truth as to the responsibility for the war, the publication of an Austrian "Red Book," on such responsibility, makes a terrific impression on the German newspapers.

Saturday afternoon the papers, which first published the substance of the book, emphasized the criminal responsibility of the Austrian statesmen and laid stress upon the fact that the actual originator of the war was the Austrian Cabinet and that the German Government was only guilty of blindly following the lead of Count von Berchtold, the uAstrian Foreign Minister.

Sunday's and today's papers, however, have to admit the overwhelming responsibility of the former Kaiser and former Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg. Proofs of their responsibility seem to be so manifest and plain that even the pan-Germna newspapers make no attempt openly to deny it. The liberal papers are evidently shocked but only the Socialist organs are roused to frank indignation.

Decided by Austria in May.

The most striking fact in the "Red Book" is that as early as May, 1914, the Austrian Cabinet decided to change the political situation in the Balkans in Austria's favor, and that by war if it should be necessary. The murder of Archduke Francis Ferdinand was merely a very welcome incident which gave the Austrian Government a pretext for attacking Serbia.

On July 5 Emperor William gave assurances to the Austrian Ambassador that Germany would stand by Austria in any event, recommended that action against Serbia be not postponed and expressed regret should the "present time so favorable to our chances be allowed to pass without taking advantage of it."

The Kaiser's assurance was confirmed on July 6 by the German Chancellor and on the next day the Austrian Cabinet decided to declare war on Serbia. Several members of the Cabinet advocated secret mobilization and an immediate invasion of Serbia without a formal declaration of war, but after discussion it was decided to send an ultimatum with such provocation that war would follow. The Berlin Government decided to play the role of a disinterested and uninformed observer and so, between July 7 and 27, it did not ask for nor receive any information from the Austrian Government.

Upon this point the Vorwaerts remarks: These tactics were consid-

PERSHING AND STAFF PRESENT RED CROSS WITH $10,000 CHECK

Gift to Be Devoted to Deserving Work Among War Widows and Children of France.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Gen. Pershing's last few days in France contained an incident which is disclosed in a report just reaching national headquarters of the American Red Cross from Paris. It was a gift of 94,625.40 francs (more than $10,000) from Gen. Pershing and the officers of his staff to the Red Cross, to be devoted to some deserving work among the mothers and children of France who suffered in the war.

Several weeks ago, it now is revealed, a chaplain attached to Gen. Pershing's headquarters visited the American Red Cross headquarters in Paris, asking to be shown the various phases of the work being carried on.

The check, bearing Pershing's signature, was the result, reaching the Red Cross the day the General bade farewell to France. A letter accompanying the donation stipulated that the money be placed in the "Stars and Stripes War Orphan Fund," which, assisted by the Red Cross, has "adopted" thousands of French children whose fathers were killed in battle, insuring for them support and means of educating themselves.

SEARCH FAILS TO FIND 488 ON SHIP SUNK IN GULF STORM

Naval Officer Reports Divers Discovered No Effort Was Made to Lower Boats on Spanish Steamer.

By the Associated Press.

KEY WEST, Fla., Sept. 22.—Search for the 400 passengers and 88 members of the crew of the Spanish passenger steamer Valbanera, lost off Rebeccas shoals light, 40 miles from here, in the recent gulf hurricane, continues without results.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Rear Admiral Decker, Commander of the Seventh Naval District, with headquarters at Key West, yesterday reported to the Navy Department examination of the wrecked steamer off Rebecca shoals light, near Key West, had established beyond doubt that she was the Spanish passenger steamer Valbanera.

Admiral Decker said that examination of the steamer's davits by divers indicated that no effort was made to lower the port boats. In that case, with a passenger list of 400 and 88 members of the crew, it would appear that many of those on board went down with the vessel. Admiral Decker reported, however, that there were no bodies or wreckage in the vicinity when the wreck was discovered by submarine chasers.

MAN PAYS 2 FINES FOR HAVING NO HEADLIGHTS NOR TAIL LIGHT

They All Turn on From Same Switch, He Protests—Fines Are From Same Bench, Judge Reports.

A new question of traffic law violation was raised today in Police Court. The case was that of Theodore Schroeder, a sponge importer of 3852A Utah place, and two charges —one of being without headlights on his automobile and one of being without a tail light, were against him.

"I don't think it's fair to make two cases out of this," protested Schroeder. "All three lights turn on from the same switch."

"Quite so; and both of the fines will be placed on you from the same bench," was Judge Mix's ready reply, as he fixed the penalty at $5 and costs for each offense, staying the fines on payment of $6 in costs. Schroeder again protested—and paid.

MOTHER AND SON, 9, FLYING TO TEXAS, STOP AT BELLEVILLE

"Family Plane" Piloted by Former Army Officer Is Being Used for Trip From Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. S. E. J. Cox, her son, Seymour, 9 years old, and their airplane pilot, former Lieut. R. R. McCabe, all of Houston, Tex., are at Scott Field, Belleville, stopping on their way from Buffalo, N. Y., to Houston, Tex., in a new Curtiss commercial airplane. They are waiting until the weather clears in the Southwest before they go on.

Mrs. Cox is the wife of the president of the General Oil Co. of Texas, who recently bought the airplane for $9000 for his family. The party left Buffalo Thursday and covered the 900 miles to Scott Field, one-half of their trip, by Saturday noon. Yesterday's storm delayed their departure.

The party hopes to make Houston within one day after they leave here.

Mrs. McCabe said she thought flying "just fine." She said she made many short flights in Texas. Seymour is so well pleased by the experience that he wants his father to take him back to his school in New York in the airplane.

The document will be signed today by Baron Kurt von Lersner, head of the German mission at Versailles.

MANY WORKERS IN CHICAGO STEEL DISTRICT STRIKE

Union Claims Are That 90 Per Cent of 87,000 Employes Are Out, but No Company Admits Over 20 Per Cent.

43 STEEL PLANTS DIRECTLY AFFECTED

Men Generally Follow Their Leaders' Direction and Go to Their Homes Without Any Disorder.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Operating with greatly reduced forces or "closed down," was the report from most of the big steel plants of the Chicago district at noon today. At South Chicago, Gary, Indiana Harbor and Hammond, conditions differed so widely, however, that the influence of local conditions in the various establishments was paramount. Union leaders were either quietly satisfied or openly jubilant, but company officials had little to say. If they talked at all, those who discussed the strike asserted that it was too early to give out statements.

All told, 43 big steel plants were directly affected by the strike order, the number of employes being estimated at more than 87,000. Union claims were that 90 per cent of this number had struck for recognition of their unions, but no company official would acknowledge more than 20 per cent actually out. Where more than this proportion had failed to report for work, the plant officials said they had been intimidated by the minority.

There were no reports of disorders from any municipal officials in the district in the first 12 hours of the strike. The men generally followed the directions of their leaders and went home from the mills. At all the mill towns, however, extra police were on duty or in reserve and, supplemented by company guards, kept the streets leading to the plants clear of loiterers.

Plan to Prevent Liquor Sale.

Agents of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice were rushed to the steel centers on reports that radicals were trying to incite strikers to violence. One South Chicago bartender was arrested and charged with serving liquor and with threatening an investigator with a revolver. Federal officials here said the investigator in question had gone into the saloon in connection with a general plan of preventing the sale of intoxicants in the strike centers.

At South Chicago the big plant of the Illinois Steel Co. was closed, although union men admitted that more than 1500 men had reported for work. The usual day shift is 4000 strong. About 500 of those who reported were said to be foremen. Many of the employes who went to work took suit cases with them and a few sent trunks into the plant.

Strikers from the two plants of the Iroqois Iron Co. said none of the men had reported for work there and similar conditions were claimed for the American Brake Shoe and Foundry Co., the Federal Furnace Co., the Riverdale Steel & Iron Co. and the Pollak Steel Co. Union officials said that the three plants of the Interstate Iron & Steel Co. at South Chicago were operating with full forces but only pending a conference between representatives of the workmen and union officials. They claimed that the employes were seeking union affiliations.

At Gary, the great establishments of the United States Steel Corporation were running with admittedly reduced forces. At Hammond, there was almost no change from the situation created by the strike there several weeks ago of employes of the Standard Steel Car Co., but at Indiana Harbor conditions approached those at South Chicago.

Blast Furnaces Close.

Six of the 11 blast furnaces at the South Chicago plant were closed during the night and should the engineers carry out their threat to strike, it is said a total of 39 blast furnaces in the Chicago district, which includes 43 mills within a radius of 90 miles of this city, will be compelled to close. Shutting down of the blast furnaces would affect the rolling mills and other branches of the steel industry.

While the engineers at Gary, Indiana Harbor, Hammond and Joliet have voted to strike in sympathy with the steel workers, it is said such action was in opposition to orders from their international officers.

At Joliet union officials claimed that 900 hundred men out of 4000 employed at the Illinois Steel Co.'s plant there walked out during the night and that before the day was over more than one-half of the force would be out.

Steel Corporation Has 145 Plants in 20 States

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The United States Steel Corporation, whose employes today became involved in a strike, has 145 plants in 20 states.

Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors, and James A. Farrell, president of the corporation, spent Sunday at their country homes. Gary issued no statement of plans Each subsidiary has been given permission to meet the situation as its officers see fit. The only general order which has been made public was the letter from Gary to the presidents of the various subsidiary companies.

It is not probable any comment will be made on the strike until the corporation learns what percentage of its 268,000 employes responds to the strike call. These reports must come from plants in Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey, Maryland, Massachusetts Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Connecticut, Alabama, California, Washington, Kentucky, Kansas, Wisconsin, Minnesota, West Virginia, Delaware, New York and Ontario, Canada.

Average Daily Pay, $6.23.

It was estimated, however, that the number of workers affected directly or indirectly, by the strike will aggregate half a million. The average daily pay of the corporation's employes, excluding the administrative and selling force, is $6.23, according to a recent report to the directors. This is an increase of 116 per cent, since 1914,, when the average was $2.83. The average annual pay in 1918 was $1950.

Iron ore properties of the corporation are mainly in the Lake Superior district, the southern region of Alabama and Georgia. Coal and coke properties are located in Pennsylvania, Virginia, Colorado, West Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. Extensive coke, oil and gas properties are also owned and controlled in a number of states and at several lake ports there are extensive ore docks. Seven ocean going steamers and numerous smaller craft are owned and operated together with more than 1000 miles of railroad.

The subsidiary companies of the corporation are the Carnegie Steel, Illinois Steel, Universal Portland Cement, Indiana Steel, Minnesota Steel, Lorain Steel, National Tube, National Steel and Wire, American Sheet and Tin Plate Co., Sharon Tin Plate, American Bridge, Union Steel, Clairton Steel, Clairton By-Product Coke, Federal Shipbuilding, Canadian Steel, Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad, Fairfield Steel and Chickasaw Shipbuilding in addition to its coal, coke, iron, ore and transportation properties. The railroads include the Bessemer and Lake Erie; Elgin, Joliet and Eastern; Duluth and Iron Range and the Duluth, Missare and Northern.

The properties owned by the corporation were valued on Jan. 1 last at $1,871,261,897 and its total assets aggregated $2,571,617,175. The undivided surplus amounted to $466,888,421 and its net income for the year 1918 was $158,631,856.

60,741 Employes Shareholders.

Records of the corporation show that 60,741 employes have become shareholders in the companies for which they work. They own 156,680 shares of stock and the pay of the employes who own it ranges from $3.50 a day for common laborers to $30 a day for skilled rollers.

KINLOCH PRESENTS RATE INCREASE PLEA

Hearing Begun Before Member of State Public Service Commission at City Hall.

The Kinloch Telephone Co. today began the presentation of its claims for permission to increase its rates, before Commissioner Noah Simpson of the State Public Service Commission at the city hall.

The company is asking for increases from $36 to $39 on two-party lines in St. Louis and from $24 to $27 a year on four-party lines. It also is asking for an increase from $72 to $84 on St. Louis business telephones.

In small towns in Missouri it asks for an increase of 25 cents a month on residence telephones and 50 cents a month on business telephones.

William R. Orthwein, counsel for the company, told the commissioner the company might be forced into the hands of a receiver unless the new rates should be granted. He asked for immediate action, saying that the advances were only half as large as the commission might be willing to grant after a more extended process of investigation. He said the company was preparing to send out its October bills to customers on the basis of the increased rate it is now asking.

H. Linton Reber, president of the company, testified that the Government had conceded that the company was entitled to net earnings of $266,000 a year. In July, he said, the company fell short of this by $20,726 and earned $1000 less than enough to meet its fixed charges.

Reber said it was expected that the rates asked for would increase the revenues $162,875 a year in St. Louis and $172,863 in Missouri.

Reber told the Commission the rates requested would enable the company to have an earning of 3 per cent. Prior to Government control of the company, he said, it had earned 5 per cent. The new rates asked, he said, would apply to 23,376 telephones in St. Louis and 25,947 in Missouri.

Electrical Worker on Stand.

D. H. Knowl, who said he represented the electrical workers and phone operators employed by the Kinloch, said the strike of operators and electrical workers in June was called off when the company agreed to submit a new wage scale to arbitration if it could obtain authorization of increased rates. Kinloch linemen, he said, received 40 cents a day less than Bell linemen.

The hearing was concluded at noon, Reber being instructed to submit data on the company's business for 11 months prior to last June.

Tomorrow the commission, meeting at the City Hall, will consider the contracts of the Union Electric Light & Power Co., for hydro-electric power from the Keokuk dam.

BETHLEHEM WORKERS DELAY JOINING STRIKE

Union Leaders Hope Schwab Will Grant Conference and Consider Their Grievances.

By the Associated Press.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Sept. 22.—Delegates representing all the unions of the 35,000 employes of the Bethlehem Steel Co. at a meeting last night decided they would not participate in the strike at present. Instead they will await the outcome of a meeting they expect to have with the company officials.

Union leaders say if they fail to offer a conference by 4 p. m. Thursday, the national committee will be asked to call a strike for next Monday.

Labor heads express the hope that Charles M. Schwab will consider their grievances and avoid a strike.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 22.—No sign of a steel strike was apparent anywhere in the Harrisburg district today. The Steelton Plant of the Bethelehem Steel Co. was in operation on the usual scale.

"If counsel don't think enough of their cases to come into court and protect them, the cases will be dismissed forthwith." He said equity cases would be disposed of between now and Dec. 1, and that December would be given to jury cases.

THOUSANDS OF WORKERS OUT IN BIG STEEL STRIKE

Union Leader Claims Indications Are That About 280,000 Men Are Idle, While Reports From Number of Points Are That Employes Are at Work.

ANOTHER CLASH WITH STRIKE CROWD

Shots Fired at Clinton, Pa., but No One Hit; Heavy Guards Are Provided for the Men Who Go to Work as Usual.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 22.—The struggle between organized labor and the employers in the steel industry is in full swing today. In the Pittsburg and nearby districts many thousands of men obeyed the orders of their leaders and failed to report when the whistles blew for the day shifts to go to work. How many joined in the walkout and with what degree of effectiveness the strike was initiated is not yet known definitely by either side in the contest.

"We got away in good shape at most of our plants in and around Pittsburg this morning," said a representative of the Carnegie Steel Co.

"We are agreeably surprised at the showing made," was the announcement made by Foster.

Union Leader's Figures.

William Z. Foster, secretary of the National Committee for Organizing Iron and Steel Workers, gave out the following figures at noon as indicating the number of men on strike:

Chicago district, 60,000; Cleveland, 30,000; Youngstown proper, 15,000; Youngstown district, including Sharon, Farrell, Newcastle, Strowthers, Butler, Canton and Massillon, 50,000; Buffalo, 12,000; Homestead, 9000; Braddock, 5000; Rankin, 3000; Clairton, 4000; Monessen and Donora, 12,000; Wheeling, 15,000; Steubenville, 6000; Pueblo, 6000; McKeesport and Duquesne, 12,000; Pittsburg City, 15,000; Vandergrift, 4000; Leechburg, 2000; Brackenridge, 5000; Johnstown, 15,000; Coatesville, 4000.

Carnegie Mill Situation.

The Carnegie Steel Co. did not issue a formal statement, but gave out information which, it was announced, came to the offices here from superintendents of various plants.

At Homestead, where the company's largest works are located, the Carnegie representatives said, whole departments are in operation with a few men absent. The men, it was stated, walked to work in large bodies. Some of the blast furnaces were banked. The same situation was reported at the company's Edgar Thompson works at Braddock. At the Carnegie plant at Duquesne the company said its information was that the works were in 100 per cent operation.

The Carrie furnaces of the Carnegie company at Rankin were reported to the offices here as not operating full, approximately 15 per cent of the men remaining away.

At Clairton, where the Carnegie by-product coke works are situated, and where the Pennsylvania State police clashed yesterday with a crowd of men in breaking up a mass meeting, the situation was reported worse than at any other place heard from by the company.

At New Castle the Carnegie rolling mills and blast furnaces were reported in good shape, with one furnace bank down and with all the men concentrated o nthe other furnaces.

All the plants of the Carnegie company within the city of Pittsburg were reported to the company, it was said, as operating close to 100 per cent.

Summing up, the representatives of the company said the "situation might have been worse." He said that in all plants where men failed to report they were nearly all foreigners.

Organizer's Claims.

Organizer Foster, in his review of the situation from his early reports, said he was agreeably surprised at the number of men out. "It will be two days before the full weight of the strike will be felt," he said. He disputed the information given out by the Carnegie company, and said that Homestead and Braddock were in "bad shape."

Foster said his reports showed that the Carnegie plants at Donora and Monessen were completely shut

MASS MEETINGS OF STEEL WORKERS ARE BROKEN UP

State Police Clash With Crowds in Sunday Gatherings at Two Points in Pennsylvania.

UNWARRANTED ACTION, SAYS UNION LEADER

No Interference With Meeting at Homestead; Union Leaders Caution Men Against Violence.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 22.—The State police had their first clash with steel strike crowds Sunday afternoon, in North Clairton and near McKeesport, where they broke up mass meetings at the request of local police officials. Strike leaders charge that a number of persons in the North Clairton crowd were severely hurt in the clash there.

William Z. Foster of the steel workers' National Committee telegraphed to Gov. Sproul late last night, protesting against the "unwarranted attacks" by the State police.

It is charged by union leaders that in the North Clairton case the mounted policemen used their clubs vigorously and injured a number in the crowd. Nineteen were arrested, some of whom were taken to jail. According to eyewitnesses, the meeting was proceeding quietly when the State police broke it up. The crowd scattered and some ran up a railroad embankment and threw stones and other missiles at the troopers. Several in the crowd were struck on the head by the policemen, it was said. Foster termed it a "murderouss attack upon law-abiding people." Some of the blast furnaces of the Carnegie Steel Co. are located at Clairton.

At McKeesport union organizers attempted to hold a mass meeting in defiance of the proclamation of Mayor George Lysle forbidding public gatherings. More than 2500 steel workers and sympathizers were gathered near the southern limits of the city when a squad of McKeesport police dispersed them, driving the crowd into Glassport, an adjoining borough. When the crowd again began to assemble in Glassport, the local police ordered the meeting dispersed. The crowd refused to move and a detachment of mounted State police, with drawn clubs, broke up the meeting. No one was injured. Two aliens were arrested for refusing to obey the order to "move on." Members of the McKeesport Chamber of Commerce were sworn in as special police. More than 2500 civilian police are available, the Mayor said.

Mass Meeting in Homestead.

No attempt was made by borough officials to stop a mass meeting last night in a hall at Homestead. I. W. Reilly, secretary of the Homestead district of the American Federation of Labor, acted as chairman. Secretary Foster spoke in a Polish hall on the South Side of Pittsburg. "The man who makes steel tomorrow is a strike-breaker," he told the workers. Pamphlets were distributed at the meeting containing statements said to have been made by Rabbi Stephen W. Wise, New York, in favor of organized labor in the steel industry.

Tarentum, Brackenridge and Natrona yesterday were posted with cards calling upon the iron and steel workers to strike. Ministers in the churches of the three towns offered special prayers for the safety of the workers and asked for Divine aid in avoiding violence and bloodshed in the community. A small detachment of State police went to Brackenridge.

Orders were given union steel workers by the union officials in charge of the Brackenridge district to avoid violence of any kind. Police Superintendent R. J. Alderdice swore in more than 130 men to act as subpatrolmen within Pittsburg during the strike.

Employes Made Deputies.

About 3000 employes of plants at McKeesport have been made Deputy Sheriffs to protect company property, it is stated. The steel plants in and about McKeesport employ approximately 18,000 workmen. All plants in the McKeesport district are under heavy guard. Searchlights were installed and command all entrances to the company's property.

The steel plants at Homestead and Duquesne are prepared to protect their property. Special barbed wire fences have been constructed about exposed property and searchlights have been installed. Deputy Sheriffs are patrolling the company properties.

Although the call of the unions made the strike effective today, skeleton Sunday shifts in many plants were not as complete as under normal conditions and union leaders said that a large number of men had decided not to report.

Cautioned Against Violence.

Officials and subsidiaries and independent concerns during the past week declared they would operate their plants if they could, and they made all preparations to do so. Union leaders in their circulars and otherwise have cautioned their men against violence. "The American Fderation of Labor has won all its great progress by peaceful and legal methods," says the strike order.

Union leaders ridicule the statements of company officials that not more than 15 per cent of the workers are organized. The leaders claim that 98 per cent of the steel workers in the union voted for the strike.

The action of borough authorities in breaking up mass meetings yesterday was on the authority of a proclamation published by William S. Haddock, sheriff of Allegheny County which included the city of Pittsburg. The proclamation notified all mayors, burgesses, justices of the peace, constables and policemen to maintain public order. It further said:

"All peace ofifcers throughout Allegheny County until the present emergency has passed are commanded to disperse and prevent upon the highways or vacant property of all populous sections the loitering or gathering of three or more persons."

man of the committee for organization of steel workers, said the men were going to strike because E. H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, had refused to treat with the union chiefs. He declared Gary had refused to listen to President Wilson, who advised a conference.

"The whole thing simmers down to the question, is E. H. Gary bigger than the chief executive of this country?" said Fitzpatrick.

Fitzpatrick declared that he had heard, but did not know it to be true, that the United States Steel Corporation had a billion dollars it was ready to spend to fight the unions. "I do know," he added, "that they raised armies and are arming them, in direct violation of the laws of the United States."

One union leader declared that the steel workers had resources of $30,000,000 to draw on to finance themselves through the strike. A steel company official said he would not be surprised if the steel workers' savings were even larger than that figure. The latter referred to the Steel Corporation's reports showing that the employes subscribed for $30,816,000 in Third and Fourth Liberty Loan bonds, an estimated $16,250,000 for the First and Second loans, and for the Fifth or Victory loan no figures have been given. In four years, the reports showed, employes had subscribed to $37,716,704 in stock of the corporation and should by this time have fully paid for half of it.

Many Gary Steel Workers Absent When Whistles Blow.

By the Associated Press.

GARY, Ind., Sept. 22.—Many steel workers failed to report for work when the whistles blew at 6 o'clock this morning at the steel mills here, although no official estimate was made by either side. The day force is nominally 7500, the total for all the shifts approximating 21,000.

All the mills were in operation with reduced forces, but no disorders occurred during the early part of the day.

It was said that the tin mills were operating with a force more nearly normal than the American Bridge Co., both subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation.

sidy. Secret service men yesterday examined the records at Clayton, and found that Miss Cassidy's sister had been a witness at the wedding, and had given her address, which was 1329 North Vandeventer. That was how they learned where to find Mrs. Antoine.

Taken Back to Kansas City.

Majors, who wears nose glasses, combs his blond hair in a pompadour, and maintains a wardrobe including 10 suits, 15 hats and caps and many silk shirts, was taken back to Kansas City yesterday afternoon by three detectives. On this journey he also wore an "Oregon boot" handcuffs and ankle chains, and was told that no chances would be taken with him. Pauline Clarke also was taken, and another detective followed them last night with Mrs. Antoine.

Majors is said by Pinkerton detectives to have been the remaining free member of the Dale Jones-Lewis brothers gang. He has been regarded as a leader in the band of 12 or 15 outlaws that in the last six months has killed 15 men, robbed 32 banks, and collected loot in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma estimated at more than $1,000,000.

Large Rewards for Capture.

Banks in large sections of those States have been kept apprehensive since the gang began its depredations, particularly because the outlaws never hesitated to "shoot their way out" of any difficulty that beset them. Bank clerks, gamblers, policemen and deputy sheriffs were among their victims. Their specialty was robbing banks and gambling houses, and much of their loot was in Liberty bonds. One bank lost $175,000 in Liberty bonds to them.

Large rewards have been offered for their capture, and eight men, including Adams and Raymond Majors, now are in custody in Kansas City, but this was not accomplished until Government secret service men were called into the case.

The arrest of Walter Majors was due to the work of H. H. Mosher, superintendent of the Pinkerton agency here, who traced him from the Maryland to the apartment, and from there to the Windemere.

BELGIAN BREAK WITH HOLLAND REPORTED

Dispatch From Berlin Says Both Countries Have Withdrawn Ambassadors.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—An official wireless dispatch from Berlin, dated Saturday, says that the Belgian Ambassador at The Hague having been withdrawn, the Dutch Ambassador at Brussels also has been withdrawn.

Several times recently there have been reports that diplomatic relations between Belgium and Holland were strained as a result of the demands of Belgium for a revision of the treaty of 1839 between Belgium and Holland under which Holland annexed the southern bank of the Scheldt River and an elongated strip of Dutch Limburg, lying between Belgium and Germany.

Belgium based her demands upon the necessity of securing a stronger military frontier and freeing the trade of Antwerp, her great port, fro mthe restrictions now placed on it by Dutch possession of the lower portion of the Scheldt and asked for political control of the southern bank of the river, and certain guarantees deemed necessary to safeguard Belgium's economic interests in South Limburg.

In return for these concessions, the Belgians suggested that Holland receive compensation in the form of certain bits of German territory inhabited by a Dutch speaking population.

The allies were believed to be favorably inclined toward the project of the free navigation of the Scheldt, but Holland is understood to have been irrevocably opposed to any renunciation of sovereignty in this connection.

A commission of the peace conference, at last accounts, was considering the situation.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—"I am going to live at Palo Alto in a place where I hope no one will say to me, 'I am cold; I am hungry!'" said Herbert Hoover on his arrival here yesterday en route to his home at Palo Alto, Cal.

"I have only seen my family one month in five years," he added. "I went to Europe for three months in 1914, but have been away from California five years."

THOUSANDS OUT IN GREAT STRIKE OF STEEL WORKERS

down, a total of three men reporting for work in the two places.

Little Trouble Reported.

From labor, corporation and police sources came the information that there was no trouble reported anywhere in the Pittsburg district during the early hours of the strike.

Information from the employers' side was to the effect that the strike line is sharply drawn between Americans and foreigners. The Americans, it was said, as a rule went to wor* while foreigners were in the big majority among the strikers.

Blast furnaces, according to company sources, where the largest percentage of foreigners are employed, were the hardest hit. The furnaces, it was said, were expected to be the weakest spots from the corporation point of view.

Reports from the West Penn and Allegheny Steel Companies were to the effect that 35 per cent of their men, virtually all foreigners, failed to report for work.

Several men were clubbed and 20 arrests were made today in the borough of Clariton when the Pennsylvania State police had another brush with crowds that refused to disperse. Several shots were fired by each side, according to Clairton police headquarters.

At the National Tube Co.'s works at McKeesport, large numbers of workmen went to work without incident. What percentage of the workers answered the whistle officials of the company would not say. The Chief of Police of the town said that the strikers were largely foreigners. At Braddock, and also at Homestead, crowds of men walked the streets, but every one was kept moving.

Dawn found mill guards, borough and city police, the mounted Pennsylvania State police, volunteer guards, deputy sheriffs, detectives and other guardians of the law on duty for any emergency.

Likewise the strike leaders in every steel mill community were abroad, instructing strikers and pickets in their duty and persuading men on their way to work to turn back and join in the strike. Early reports indicated that hundreds of men were turned back in various communities.

Full protection as far as could be made was given to men who determined to go to work, the streets and roads leading to the mills in every steel community in the Monongahela, Allegheny and Ohio valleys being patrolled by armed guards.

2000 Workmen Idle at Colorado Fuel Company Plant.

PUEBLO, Colo., Sept. 22.—About 2000 men of the first morning shift at the Minnequa plant of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co. here did not go to work this morning. Instead they gathered in Bessemer City Park near the plant.

It was estimated 80 per cent of the first shift failed to report.

DENVER, Sept. 22.—The steel plant of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co. at Pueblo closed this morning as a result of the strike of workers, according to a statement issued at the offices of the company here. Not enough men reported to operate the plant, it was said.

Two Great Strikes in Steel Trade Lost by the Workers

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.

TWO great strikes have marked the history of the steel trade in the United States—the Homestead strike of 1892, in which the famous battle between strikers and Pinkerton detectives took place in Homestead, Pa., on July 6, and the strike of 1901, best known as the "tin plate" strike.

In the first instance the strike was against the Carnegie Steel Co., then an independent, but now a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation. H. C. Frick, who now assists in directing the fight of the Steel Corporation as a member of its Finance Committee, directed the Homestead strike as the lieutenant of Andrew Carnegie. He also figured as a director of the 1901 strike and is the only man of prominence of the 1892 strike to figure in the present situation.

M. E. Tighe, who now heads the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Sheet and Tin Workers, helped, as assistant secretary, to direct the strike of 1901.

The causes, results and principal features of the two great strikes follow:

Homestead—Cause, cut in wages; duration, five months; result, company victory; number killed July 6, 20; number dead of wounds, 15; number injured, 150; cause of battle, attempt to put large number of Pinkertons into Homestead; estimated loss to strikers in wages, $2,000,000; estimated loss to company, $4,000,000.

Tin Plate Strike—Cause, full recognition of union in all plants; privilege of organizing everywhere; duration, 60 days; result company victory; loss of members and control of plants by Amalgamated Association; estimated loss in wages, $26,730,000; estimated loss in profits to company, $9,000,000.

Union Lake Seamen Refuse to Work on Steel Corporation Boats.

By the Associated Press.

Union Leaders Claim That 15,000 Men Are Out at Cleveland.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 22.—Union leaders claim that at least 15,000 steel workers are out and that plants of some of the independent mills have closed. Comuany officials would make no statement.

The 16 mills of the American Steel and Wire Co., a steel corporation subsidiary, were completely closed down. The McKinney Steel Co., largest independent plant, also was shut down. The Bourne-Fuller company plant, another independent, employing 2600 men, was reported idle.

Practically All Mills in Mahoning Valley Crippled by Strike.

By the Associated Press.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 22.—Early reports from the various steel centers at 8 o'clock this morning indicated that the employes obeyed the strike orders generally and that practically all mills in the Mahoning Valley either were badly crippled or may be forced to suspend operations altogether. At union headquarters it was declared that the strike is a complete success and that every mill is closed.

Lorain and Elyria, O., Plants Reported Working As Usual.

By the Associated Press.

LORAIN, O., Sept. 22.—Officials of steel plants here and in Elyria announced that their mills opened as usual this morning with virtually all of their men working.

Officials of the National Tube Co., a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, issued a statement that all the 5000 men on the day shift had returned to work. Cromwell Steel Co. officials said their 400 men did not strike.

Union Men Claim 70 Per Cent of Workers at Buffalo Are Out.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Union men claimed that 70 per cent of the workmen in the steel plants of the Lackawanna Steel Co., the Rogers Brown Steel Co., and the Donner Steel Co. obeyed the strike call today.

Philadelphia Affected Little by Strike of Steel Men.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—The nation-wide strike of steel workers had little effect in Philadelphia today, but at Coatesville, near here, a few hundred workers joined in the walkout. Normal conditions prevailed at the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Co., the Pencoyd Iron Works and the Baldwin plant.

Every Steel Plant in Birmingham District Operating.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 22.—Every steel plant in the Birmingham district was operating today, most of them practically at full capacity. Labor officials attributed the small response to the strike order to the fact that tomorrow is pay day at two big plants in the Ensley district and that two others pay Thursday.

All Plants in the Wheeling District Closed.

By the Associated Press.

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 22.—All steel plants in this district were closed this morning, approximately 8000 employes having joined the nation-wide strike. No disorder had been reported up to 11 o'clock this forenoon, when it was said no attempt would be made to reopen the plants.

By the Associated Press.

COATESVILLE, Pa., Sept. 22.—Of the more than 5000 men employed by the Coatesville branch of the Midvale Steel Corporation and the Lukens Steel Co., between 200 and 300 remained away at the former and 100 at the latter. Most of those on strike are foreign laborers.

By the Associated Press.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Sept. 22.—Following the lead of the La Belle Iron Works Saturday evening, the Mingo works and Steubenville blast furnaces of the Carnegie Steel Co., closed down tight at midnight Sunday.

800 Fail to Report for Duty at Milwaukee Plant.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 22.—About 800 out of 1800 employes of the Illinois Steel Co., a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, located at Bay View, Milwaukee, failed to report for duty this morning, according to members of the Steel Workers' Union.

Thousands of Joliet Steel Men Fail to Report.

JOLIET, Ill., Sept. 22.—Making good on their decision to walk out at midnight, determined at a meeting yesterday which 3500 workers attended, thousands of employes of the Illinois Steel company plant here failed to go to work today.

D. R. Mathias, superintendent, announced that the mill would operate as long as there were men to work.

Men Continue to Work at Minnesota Steel Plant.

DULUTH, Sept. 22.—There is no strike at the Minnesota Steel Company's plant here, according to officials of the company this morning. The men are reported unorganized, and it was stated no man quit work.

News from the Steel Corporation's mines on the range is incomplete but the general tenor is that men there reported this morning for work as usual.

ST. LOUIS CONCERN BUYS $4,500,000 GRANITE CITY PLANT

Best-Clymer Manufacturing Co., a $3,000,000 Corporation, Purchases Corn Products Co. Factory.

LATTER HAD PROFIT OF $3,000,000 IN YEAR

Sale Was Made Necessary by Order of U. S. Supreme Court, Which Held Illinois Firm Was Trust.

The Best-Clymer Manufacturing Co., a $3,000,000 corporation which manufactures table preserves in its plant at Virginia avenue and Davis street, announced today that it has negotiated the purchase of the Corn Products Refining Co. plant, in Granite City, for $4,500,000.

The announcement followed a series of increases in the market quotation of the company's common stock which has brought its price in 60 days from $45 to $73. Today's highest price was $75.

The sale of the Granite City plant was made necessary by a dissolution order of the United States Supreme Court, which held the company to be a trust. Its main plant is in Argo, a Chicago suburb. The Granite City plant is said to have made a profit of nearly $3,000,000 last year.

Stock to Be Exchanged.

Letters were received today by holders of the Best-Clymer Company's common stock, asking them to forward their stock certificates to the Mercantile Trust Co., before Friday, to be exchanged on the basis of a share and one-half of founders', or Class B, stock in a new corporation for each share of Best-Clymer common.

They are asked to send their proxies to L. P. Best, M. G. Clymer and R. R. Bang, president, vice president and secretary of the company, to be voted in a stockholders' meeting next Monday, at which action is to be taken on the assignment of the stock to the new company, and on the contract for the purchase of the Corn Products plant.

Holders of Best-Clymer common will have the right to subscribe for two shares of market, or class A, stock in the new corporation, for every three shares now held by them, provided they deposit 10 per cent of the subscription price, $50 a share, with the Mercantile Trust Co. by Friday.

Originally Built for Clymer.

The Granite City plant was originally built by Clymer, for the St. Louis Syrup and Preserving Co., which later was bought out by the Corn Products Refining Co.

The Best-Clymer Co. was reorganized last August, with an increased capitalization, under the direction of R. King Kauffman, vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co. Besides its South Side plant, it owns a large sorghum mill at Fort Smith, Ark., and has 7000 acres planted in cane in Arkansas.

The announcement to stockholders says that the seller is to receive $4,500,000, but is to lease the plant for one year, ending Oct. 1, 1920, at a rental of $1,250,000, payable in installments.

The new company, besides the capital required to acquire the Granite City plant, will have $1,000,000 additional working capital, it is announced. The board of directors of the Best-Clymer Co. has ratified the plan of reorganization by unanimous vote.

PLATFORM FOR NEW POLITICAL PARTY BEING MADE IN NEW YORK

Committee of 48 Will Present Tentative Plans to National Convention in St. Louis.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The Committee of Forty-eighth, which has called a national convention in St. Louis, Dec. 9, for the organization of a new political party, is at work here in the preparation of a tentative platform which will be presented to the convention.

President indication are that it will contain many radical features. Preliminary to writing the platform the committee sent to all those affiliated in the movement a request for their views on the Plumb plan, on Government ownership of utilities, "Industrial Democracy," universal military training, "a Responsible Cabinet," democratic control of foreign affairs and "restoration of free speech."

YOUR DRUGGIST will receive your Want Ads for the Post-Dispatch at the same rates charged at the main office. Try him. He sells other things than medicine. Look around.

MAN BELIEVED TO HAVE DROWNED

Walks Behind Rubbish Wagon on Dump Barge and Disappears.

Adam Mass, 54 years old, of 806 Geyer avenue, is believed to have been drowned today in the river at the foot of Barton street. He was seen to drive on a city dump barge with a wagonload of rubbish and back it close to the edge of the barge.

Others who were on the barge said they saw Mass go behind the wagon, but did not see him again. They said they were sure he did not walk away toward the levee and they felt certain he had slipped off the barge.

WILSON WINS CALIFORNIA FOR LEAGUE, GETTING GREAT RECEPTION IN LOS ANGELES

President Applauded Heartily as He Answers Senator Johnson's Arguments—Fails to Explain Why Troops Are in Siberia.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1919).

EN ROUTE TO RENO, Nev., Sept 22.—President Wilson leaves the Pacific coast triumphant. That is an extreme statement to make and will be disputed by those who look at the league of nations as a political question or as somehow akin to the prestige or political fortunes of Woodrow Wilson.

But the idea, not necessarily the man, has triumphed. Such demonstrations of enthusiasm not only, but such quick perception of the logic of the argument, such readiness to accept the plain language of the treaty of peace rather than the interferences and implications read into the document by men who seek not its revision or perfection, but its absolute defeat, such spontaneous acclaim as the Pacific coast has given editorially, vocally, politically and otherwise can have but one meaning to anyone who forgets the hypocrites of both the Democratic and Republican parties and their respective demagogues and observes mass impulse, mass reasoning and mass demand.

Best Speech at Los Angeles.

In many respects the speech which President Wilson made at the Auditorium in Los Angeles was the best of the whole tour. Not because so many Johnson men stood with him and cheered, not because Republicans predominated in the meeting, not because California felt proud that she had cast the deciding electoral votes which made Woodrow Wilson President, but because the sheer force of his explanations on Shantung, on the question of six votes for Britain to America's one, and the policy of isolation or partnership caused a deep reaction against the men who are now believed to have misrepresented the contents of the treaty itself, an unforgivable thing in an intelligent electorate like California.

Senator Hiram Johnson is the strongest political figure in the State. Were there an election tomorrow and domestic issues involved, he would carry the State, but his own friends have told me that they feared he would not be successful on the league issue if it were put to a vote and they were not altogether sure some permanent damage had not been done to this remarkable prestige by his tactics in the league of nations controversy.

Practically every argument which Senator Johnson has made but one was answered by the President while he was in California. Mr. Wilson failed to explain why American troops stayed in Siberia and why more of them were still sailing for Russia. The anti-league newspapers are offering that concrete fact of the present as against the President's promises of the future and the President has not yet given an idea of what the United States Government is driving at in its Siberian policy. But as to the other points made by Mr. Johnson, while the President did not mention the junior Senator from California by name, nevertheless his audience seemed familiar with the Senator's arguments and were intensely eager to hear Mr. Wilson's answers. The President made even clearer than he did at San Francisco the background of the Shantung award.

Got Territory in 1898.

He told how Germany, Russia, France and Japan had each compelled China in 1898 to give them territory for long periods of time, most of them for 99 years, and how helpless China was forced to give up her sovereignty in these leased territories. He told how the United States, under William McKinley and Secretary John Hay, did not make a protest, and he said that it was not because Messrs. McKinley and Hay would not have done so if they could but that under international law they could only express their interest with respect to American trade and equality of commercial opportunity. He explained, too, how Japan forced Russia out of Port Arthur in the Russo-Japanese war, and how Russia ceded the territory to Japan, while America, though President Roosevelt helped bring about the peace negotiations of that war at Portsmouth, N. H., felt powerless to interfere. Now, Mr. Wilson pointed out, Japan did the same thing at Kischau that she did at Port Arthur. She drove her enemy out, but she was induced to do so by Great Britain and France, who, needing her naval assistance in the Pacific, promised by solemn treaty to give her all German possessions in China.

Inasmuch as it was 11 p. m. in Los Angeles and therefore 1 a. m. Sunday morning in the East, the text of the President's speech missed the main editions of Eastern newspapers. So I quote some pertinent passages. After referring, for instance, to Japan's solemn promise to return Shantung to China as soon after that country ratifies the peace treaty, the President said:

Rights Only Economic.

"Great Britain has not promised to return Wei-Hai-Wai, France has not promised to return her part. Japan has promised to relinquish the sovereign rights which were acquired by Germany for the remaining 78 of the 99 years of the lease and to retain only what other Governments have in many other parts of China, namely the right to build and operate the railways under a corporation and to exploit the mines in the immediate neighborhood of that railway. In other words, she retains only the rights of economic concessions.

"Personally I am frank to say that I think all these nations have invaded some of the essential rights of China by going too far in the concessions which they have demanded, but that is an old story, and we are beginning a new story. In the new story we all have the right to talk about what they have been doing and to convince them by the pressure of public opinion that a different course of action would be just and right.

And in another place in his speech the President asked dramatically: "Let us put those gentlemen to their test who are objecting to the Shantung settlement. Are they ready to fight Great Britain and France and Japan, who will have to stand together, in order to get this province back for China?

"I know they are not. And their interest in China is not the interest of assisting China, but of defeating the treaty. They know beforehand that a modification of the treaty in that respect cannot be obtained, and they are now insisting upon what they know is impossible. But if they ratify the treaty and accept the covenant, they do put themselves in a position to assist China. I am for helping China and not turning away from the only way in which I can help her. These are the facts about Shantung. Doesn't the thing look a little different?"

Crowd Shouted "Shame!"

It was not long after this that the crowd shouted "Shame!" as the President outlined the argument of his opponents, especially on the question of votes for Great Britain. Mr. Wilson again made a ten-strike when he read from the treaty and showed that the assembly in which Great Britain has six delegates has no voting power except on the question of admitting new members and that for the most part it is a debating society. The President won his biggest applause as he asked the audience if, after giving Panama and Cuba, countries especially under the influence of the United States, each a vote, it would be fair to deny Canada a delegate. He paid tribute to New Zealand, South Africa, India and Australia.

"Why," he said, "when I was in Paris, the men who I could not tell apart, except by their hats, were the Americans and the Australians. They both had the swing of fellows who say 'the gang is all here, what do we care?' Would you want to deprive these great communities of a voice in the debate? Why, my fellow citizens, it is a proposition which has never been stated, because to state it answers it."

The President declared that the assembly was really powerless so far as action was concerned, that it was a debating formu, and that the council was the executive body, and in that unanimous agreement was always necessary and that since America and the British Empire each had one vote, no nation could compel the United States to take any action against her will.

Mr. Wilson has hitherto ignored Senator Johnson's argument that America, as the only solvent nation, was about to go in partners with the bankrupt nations of Europe. But at Las Angeles he struck away wtih unwonted bitterness at that suggestion.

Calls Idea Hideous.

"We are told," he said, "we are strong and they are weak; that we still have economic or financial independence and they have not. Why, my fellow citizens, what does that mean? That means they went into the redemption of the freedom of the world sooner than we did and gave everything that they had to redeem it. And now we, because we did not go in so soon or lose so much, want to make profit of the redeemers. The thing is hideous. It is unworthy of every tradition of America. I speak of it not because I think that sort of thing takes the least hold upon the consciousness or the purpose of America, but because it is a pleasure to condemn so ugly a thing.

question of deserting decrepit Eu- Shantung and the respective powers of the Assembly and Council, or the question of deserting descrepit Europe were not sufficient to make his Los Angeles speech notable, his conclusion alone would have been enough. In a few sentences he practically apologized for his illfated appeal of last October for a Democratic Congress, a petition which was repeated far and wide by the rank and file of the Republican party as a reflection on their Americanism. Mr. Wilson was urging his hearers to make their impulse felt at Washington.

"I do not mean," he said, "by any threat of political disaster. Why my fellow citizens, may I indulge in a confidence. I have had men politically disposed say to me as a Democrat, 'This is all good. These leaders of the Republican party in Washington are going to ruin the party.' They seem to think that I will be pleased. I do not want to see the great Republican party misrepresented and misled. I do not want to see any advantage reaped by the party I am a member of because another great party has been misrepresented, because I believe in the loyalty and Americanism and high ideal of my fellow citizens who are Republicans just as much as I believe in these things in Democrats. It seems almost absurd to say that. Of course I do. When we get to the borders of the United States, we are neither Republicans nor Democrats. It is our privilege to scrap inside the family just as much as we please, but it is our duty as a nation in those matters of international concern which distinguish us to subordinate all such differences and be a united family and speak with one voice what we all know to be the high conceptions of American manhood and womanhood.

Cheered for Several Minutes.

The President was cheered for several minutes as he made that statement. But his speech was frequently interrupted by demonstrations. Mr. Wilson had come into what may have been regarded as hostile territory because Senator Johnson represented it in the United States Senate, but California is no longer hostile. It is preponderantly for the league of nations, and whether Senator Johnson is busy next week or next month in the Senate, he will find California for an explanation of his course in the present controversy.

The men and women and especially the women, are puzzled by Senator Johnson's opposition and my prediction is that long after the treaty has been ratified Hiram Johnson will be explaining his attitude to his many friends in California who cannot now understand what happened at Washington or what company he kept in the Senate, that caused him to forget the proud boast that California is the most progressive state in the Union and that, whether in domestic or international affairs, always recognizes the ideas that mean going forward, not backward, in civilized society.

CONVENTION OF STEEL ENGINEERS OPENS HERE

400 Attend First Session at Hotel Statler—Machine Shop on Exhibition.

Four hundred delegates representing the steel industry of the country attended the opening of the thirteenth annual convention of the Association of Iron and Steel Electrical Engineers at Hotel Statler today. The first business session, which was to have been held in the forenoon, was postponed until after luncheon because of a delay in setting up electrical exhibits in the ballroom.

Many men prominent in the steel industry are attending the convention. D. M. Petty, president of the Bethlehem Steel Co.; B. W. Gilson, vice-president of the Carnegie Steel Co., Youngstown, O., James Farrington, of the La Belle Iron Works, Steubenville, O.; F. D. Egan, of the Pittsburg Steel Foundries, Midland, Pa.; E. S. Jefferies, of the Steel Company of Canada, Ltd., Hamilton, Ont.; G. W. Richardson, American Bridge Co., Pencoyd, Pa.; and J. F. Kelly, of Pittsburg, all members of the board of directors of the association, are here.

Officers will be elected in the afternoon, after the reports for the last year have been read. The reading of papers will begin tomorrow morning.

Machine Shop in Ballroom.

The ballroom of the hotel has been transformed into a machine shop, with dynamoes, circuit breakers, tools, electrical transformers, automatic hammers, controllers, lubricating devices, and other electrical appliances on exhibit in specially constructed booths.

Many delegates are accompanied by their wives. A card party will be held at the hotel this afternoon for them and an informal ball is to be given tonight. Tomorrow morning they will visit the Midland Valley Country Club and Thursday they will attend a luncheon at the M. A. A. and a theater party in the afternoon.

Tomorrow morning a paper on the Educational Committee work will be read by A. B. Holcomb, chairman of the committee, and "Safety Rules for Government of Employes Working on Electrical Equipment" will be discussed by Walter Greenwood. Other papers on engineering subjects are to be read and new inventions and processes of manufacture will be presented. The world's production of iron and steel, and new devices to increase the production, will be discussed during the four days of the business sessions.

Banquet Wednesday.

The annual banquet will be held Wednesday night. The delegates and their wives will attend and Clarence H. Howard, president of the Commonwealth Steel Co., will preside.

The association, which was organized 14 years ago, has aided in securing legislation regulating the direction of industrial safety and welfare through their annual conventions, and co-operation between the iron and steel industries and the electrical manufacturers has secured superior equipment for the plants. The National Safety Council is an outgrowth of their work.

The convention committee is composed of A. H. Swartz of Cleveland, O., chairman; G. M. Baker, H. C. Cronk, J. E. Fries, W. S. Hall, F. D. Egan, J. F. Kelly, W. Robbins, A. R. Ross and W. H. Williams. Although only 400 are in attendance, about 1000 are expected tomorrow. According to Swartz, the convention will not be seriously affected by the steel strike.

ered by Berlin to be very diplomatic, but they were simply idiotic."

On July 21, Gottlieb von Jagow, then German Foreign Minister, inquired for the first time about the contents of the Austrian note and, on receiving the text a day later, informed the Austrian Ambassador that the German Government was "naturally in ful agreement with the note."

Then the unexpected happened. The Austrian ultimatum, which was intended to provoke an indignant reply from Serbia, was accepted by the Serbian Government. Even Emperor William refused to see any further reason for war and instructed Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg to intervene. But the Austrian Cabinet had decided on July 7 to make war, no matter what the Serbian reply might be.

It is the consensus of opinion among the Socialist newspapers of Germany that the protocol of the Austrian Cabinet counsel of July 7, 1914, will stand as the most criminal document in history.

German Foreign Office Blames Count Berchtold.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sunday, Sept. 21.—While no official statement has as yet been obtainable in connection with the publication of the Austrian "Red Book," Foreign Office attaches who have been willing to discuss the disclosures have ventured the opinion that "probably the most surprised men who read them will be Dr. Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, former German Imperial Chancellor, and Gottlieb von Jagow, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, and possibly Viscount Grey, who in 1914 was British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs."

Wilhelmstrasse believes, however, that the revelations will not minimize the guilt of Russia, while on the other hand they may clear up points relative to the German attitude during the critical days of July, 1914, especially her position on Viscount Grey's proposal to submit the Russo-Austrian dispute to arbitration.

It is declared at the Foreign Office that the evidence proves the German Government not only transmitted Viscount Grey's suggestion to Vienna, but was "insistent in urging its acceptance." It is held to be proved that Count Leopold von Berchtold, Austrian Foreign Minister, relayed his answer to Berlin, sending it by courier, who reached here after mobilization had been ordered.

In the meantime, Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg had been obliged to put off Sir William Edward Foschen, the British Ambassador, informing him that no answer had been received from the Austrian Foreign Office. It is declared that the Austrian Red Book "disposes of the legend of the crown council at Potsdam," at which a decision was reached to begin hostilities.

HERMAN W. KASTOR, 81, DIES OF PARALYSIS

Retired Founder of Advertising Company Succumbs at Home of Daughter.

Herman W. Kastor, 81 years old, retired founder of the H. W. Kastor & Sons' Advertising Co. of St. Louis and Chicago, died of paralysis, following an attack of apoplexy, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. A. Kahn, 3811 West Pine boulevard, at 1:20 a. m. today. He was stricken at 9 o'clock last night.

He retired from active business in 1902. For several years he had lived at the Kahn home. He was the father of Frederick Kastor, of 6208 Washington avenue, and of Arthur, William, Richard, Ernest, Benjamin and Louis Kastor, all of Chicago, and Mrs. H. O. Krone of Bartlesville, Ok.

Kastor was born in Bavaria and came to the United States in 1852 and engaged in the importing business. He married Miss Theresa Rudolph, his partner's daughter, in 1860. She died in 1899.

Kastor was a corporal in a New York regiment and later a Second Lieutenant in a Kansas regiment in the Civil War.

He settled in Wyandotte (now Kansas City), Kan., after the war and started the first German language newspaper in Kansas, moving his paper first to Atchison, Kan., and then to St. Joseph, Mo., where he became editor and part owner of the daily and weekly Volksblatt. He sold out this interest in 1895 and came to St. Louis and started in the advertising business.

FARMER CONFESSES HE KILLED NEIGHBOR AND SURRENDERS

Tells Policemen He Shot Relative in North Carolina Sept. 4; Wants to Stand Trial.

Fletcher Smith, 39 years old, a farmer, from Campbell's, Stokes County, N. C., informed two policemen at Union Station last night that he was wanted in his home town for murder. At police headquarters he dictated a confession that he had shot and killed his neighbor, Robert Lawrence, 20 years old.

Smith said that with his brother, Zap Smith, and the latter's brother-in-law, Lawrence, he was taking moonshine whisky to Salem, N. C., Sept. 4, in a covered wagon when Zap Smith and Lawrence engaged in a family quarrel.

Lawrence reached for a shotgun, Smith said, and the two brothers drew revolvers. Smith said that he shot Lawrence in the abdomen. The brothers took the wounded man to a hospital at Salem and then returned to their homes. Lawrence died two days later.

"I remained at home three days," Smith said, "and intended to stand trial for the killing, but when it occurred to me that I also would be charged with moonshining I got scared and hiked out. I served a year and a day in Atlanta, Ga., four years ago for moonshining and I didn't want any more of it."

Smith's surrender followed his meeting yesterday with a man from his part of the country who informed him that the newspapers had published a great deal about the slaying of Lawrence and advised Smith to go home and stand trial.

6 NURSES MAROONED IN TEXAS, RED CROSS TELEGRAM SAYS

Workers Sent From San Antonio and Houston Said to Be on Peninsula Near Corpus Christi.

Six Red Cross nurses who were sent from San Antonio and Houston, Tex., to do relief work in the storm-swept district, are marooned by water on a peninsula three miles east of Corpus Christi, Tex., according to a telegram received by Alfred Fairbank, manager of the Southwest division, Red Cross, from Director of Civilian Relief Jones. The message added that the personal effects of the nurses had been lost, but did not give the nurses' names. It is not known if any of them are St. Louisans.

Eight members of I Company, Thirty-seventh Infantry, engaged in relief work, also are missing, Jones wired. This entire company recently lost all its personal equipment in the storm, but was re-equipped by the Red Cross workers within two hours.

Red Cross relief stations have been established in all the afflicted towns, with headquarters at Corpus Christi in a church building. The most urgent need at present is for women's clothing.

MOVE BEGUN TO CHECK UTILITIES COMMISSION

Tenth Ward Association Seeks Law as Result of Increased Street Car Fares.

The Civic League and several neighborhood organizations will consider a resolution which was adopted yesterday by the Tenth Ward Improvement Association, in a meeting at Fountain Hall, Broadway and Chippewa street, demanding a special session of the Legislature to pass legislation to free St. Louis public utilities from the control of the State Public Service Commission. This move is directed against the 7, 7 1-7, 7½ and 8 cent carfare, which was authorized for St. Louis by the commission.

The Tenth Ward Association voted, in case the Governor should refuse to call a special session, to put initiative petitions in circulation. This would have to be done throughout the State, but the assistance of Kansas City would be counted on, as the measure would also affect that city. It is proposed that the measure shall apply to cities of 50,000 or more inhabitants.

Gives Utilities Advantages.

Visiting representatives of other bodies spoke at the Tenth Ward meeting. Secretary Budenz of the Civic League said the Public Service Commission had given the public utility corporations more advantages than they ever got through bribery or burglary. He cited the act of the commission in establishing a minimum for the Laclede Gas Light Co. when none was asked; the establishment of an 8-cent fare in Kansas City and the granting of a higher children's fare in St. Louis than asked or desired by the United Railways.

Nils Grant, Frank H. Gerhart and T. J. Schueddig were other chief speakers.

U. S. MARINES REPORTED TO HAVE LANDED NEAR FIUME

Washington, However, Has No Confirmation of Advices Emanating From Italian Sources.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Sept. 22.—American marines have been landed at Buccari, a small town on an arm of the Gulf of Quarnero, about 10 miles southeast of Fiume, says a dispatch to the Messagero. One American ship is in Fiume harbor, according to advices, but the anchorage is considerable distance from the city.

Gen. Badoglio's ultimatum to the D'Annunzio soldiers, giving them until Friday night to leave Fiume is said to have been modified so that the time limit would expire last night an additional 48 hours being given.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Landing of a party of American marines at Buccari, near Fiume, reported last night in dispatches from Milan and Rome, if it is a fact, undoubtedly was by order of Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, commander of the Mediterranean squadron, as the Navy Department, so far as could be learned early today, had received no advices on the subject.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—Troops under Gabriele d'Annunzio, the insurgent Italian commander at Fiume, have been extending their zone of occupation into Jugo-Slav territory, according to the Jugo-Slav delegation in Paris. They penetrated seven miles into Jugo-Slavia on Saturday, occupying the heights at Risniak, dominating the surrounding country.

The Jugo-Slavs did not clash with the D'Annunzio forces executing this movement, the delegation stated.

BOSTON CENTRAL LABOR UNION VOTES AGAINST GENERAL STRIKE

Report That Time Is Not Yet Opportune Is Accepted Unanimously at Committee Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—The Boston Central Labor Union, at a meeting yesterday held for the purpose of determining its attitude toward the police strike in this city, decided against calling a general strike at this time.

The report of President Michael J. O'Donnell, on behalf of the committee of 17 which has had charge of the situation for the Central Labor Union, that "the time is not now opportune for the ordering of a general strike," was unanimously accepted.

"We will go along slowly," O'Donnell said, "and when the time comes for organized labor to make a protest, the public will know that nobody will be to blame but the authorities who refuse to make a move to avert it."

It was unanimously voted to place a weekly assessment on the members of all the unions for the benefit of the police.

R-34 OBSERVER TO REFEREE RACE

Lansdowne Will Judge Army and Navy Balloon Event Here.

Lieutenant-Commander Zachary Lansdowne, who, as the representative of Secretary of the Navy Daniels will referee the balloon races between the army and navy here Friday, was the American naval officer assigned by the Navy Department to represent the United States Government on the R-34, the British dirigible which made the first transatlantic flight last July.

He was an observer on the flight and also had to attend to the elevator and rudder controls and watch the gas pressure in the keel at times.

ST. LOUIS ADMEN ARRIVE IN NEW ORLEANS

Replica of New Mississippi Fleet of Barges Is Presented to Crescent City by Mayor Kiel.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 22.—A replica of the new Mississippi River fleet of barges has been presented by St. Louis to New Orleans by the St. Louis delegation to the fifteenth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, in celebration of the recently opened freight traffic on the Mississippi between the two cities.

The presentation was made yesterday in the Mayor's office at the city hall by Mayor Kiel of St. Louis, and Mayor Behrman of New Orleans accepted on behalf of this city. About 100 persons, members of three St. Louis advertising organizations, were represented. Paul V. Bunn of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, Charles F. Hatfield of the St. Louis Convention Bureau and city officials of New Orleans were present.

Strong Bond of Kinship.

Both Mayors emphasized in their speeches the strong bond of kinship and commercial interests between the two cities and the increasing value to both of the deep waterways movement.

The St. Louis delegation arrived here at noon yesterday on a special train. About 50 men and women constituted the delegation, representing the Advertising Club of St. Louis, the Junior Advertising Club and the Women's Advertising Club. An impromptu parade from the station to the Grunewald Hotel was formed by Arthur Siegel and M. E. Holderness. Everybody was provided with a tag eight inches in diameter bearing the statement that St. Louis is surrounded by the United States, and as all the organizations carried their banners and each person wore a hatband with "St. Louis" in big letters on it, the fact that the St. Louis delegation had arrived soon was known from one end of the line of march to the other.

Literature Scattered.

Last night a committee of St. Louis boosters began posting the town with St. Louis and deep waterways literature. J. F. Crinin of the Advertising Club, Walter Weisenberger of the Chamber of Commerce and H. M. Crutcher, the Mayor's secretary, are the committee.

A meeting of the entire St. Louis delegation was called today by President John Ring Jr. of the Advertising Club of St. Louis, and instructions given the members. St. Louis will vote for Indianapolis instead of New York as the meeting place of the next convention. St. Louis also will put up John Ring Jr. for the vice presidency of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World to represent District No. 5 of the United States.

PRINTERS GET NEW INCREASE IN WAGES OF 9 TO 12.6 PER CENT

Is Second Granted by Daily Newspapers Since Present Contract Went Into Effect Feb. 8, 1917.

A wage increase of 9 to 12.6 per cent, offered by the daily newspaper publishers and accepted yesterday by Typographical Union No. 8, is the second such increase granted since the present contract between the publishers and the printers went into effect Feb. 8, 1917. The two increases amount to an addition of 19 to 23.7 per cent over the contract figures.

The first increase was granted June 1 last. At that time, the contract, which was originally for five years from its original date in 1917, was extended for two years. The increase under the contract has been from $29.16 to $39 a week for day hand workers, and from $32.40 to $42 for night hand workers. For day piece workers, the increase has been from 11½ cents a thousand to 14 cents, and for night piece workers, from 13½ to 16 cents.

DOCTORS FIND REMEDY FOR COLDS AND FLU

Calotabs, the New Nausealess Calomel Tablets, Cut Short Colds and May Prevent Flu By Keeping Liver Active.

Physicians have learned from experience, during the epidemic of influenza, that one of the most important factors in the prevention of flu and pneumonia is to keep the liver active so that the digestive organs may be in perfect working order and the system thereby enabled to throw off colds, check sore throats, and resist serious complications. For this purpose they have found that the new, nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, are far more effective even than the old style calomel, which was formerly the universal favorite, as Calotabs do not weaken the patient, nor interfere with the appetite and digestion.

At the first sign of a cold or sore throat, doctors recommend one Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea, nor the slightest interference with your diet, pleasure, or work. Next morning you wake up feeling fine, your liver is active, and your appetite is keen for a good breakfast.

For your protection Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. All druggists recommend and guarantee Calotabs. Your money back if you are not delighted with them.—ADV.

Kimonos from Japan

At Very Special Prices

CHERRY Blossom time in old Kyoti, Japan, is reflected in the Kimono Department today. The same gorgeously-embroidered robes are there which were worn in the Cherry Blossom dances in that city. This is possible since the robes are never worn but the one time. The custom requires that the daughters of prominent Japanese citizens shall be chosen to appear in this Springtime celebration and the kimono to be worn is presented to her by the Government. To wear it again would be sacrilegious—so they are kept as mementoes, or on rare occasions sold.

Beautiful of material and rich and radiant in their embroidery of silk and metal threads, those romantic bits of old Japan are here for your selection. Each carefully pierced design is in some way symbolic of happiness and to possess it is to bring good fortune to yourself.

The Prices are $65, $75, $100

BUILDING WORKERS CONTINUE STRIKE DESPITE EXPULSION

Business Agent Says Hodcarriers Will Walk Out If Nonunion Men Are Employed.

Striking building laborers met yesterday at New Club Hall, Thirteenth street and Chouteau avenue, and voted unanimously, according to S. R. McCoy, their business agent, to continue the strike in spite of their suspension from the Building Trades Council and an order from their international headquarters to resume work under their contract.

The strike was called last Monday to enforce demands for increased wages from 38 to 50 cents an hour to a uniform wage of 75 cents an hour for building wreckers, excavators, carpenters' helpers and concrete workers. About 2500 men are out, affecting work on all the large buildings under construction or being wrecked.

McCoy said the hodcarriers would join the laborers in the strike if an attempt were made by the contractors to employ nonunion laborers.

Seidel Plays Wild Gypsy Dances

Gypsy musicians started the dancing craze in Hungary with their famous "Csardas," or tavern dances. Perhaps the most dazzling of this fascinating music is the "Hejre Kati (pronounced High-ra-catty) Scenes from the Csarda." Toscha Seidel interprets it with irresistible fire.

French Army Band Superb in "Arlesienne"

Bizet's exquisite "Arlesienne Suite" must have mightily appealed to these veteran bandsmen of the Marne, for they play it as if they love it. As in Bizet's opera Carmen, these melodies are strongly influenced by the composer's study of French and Spanish folk-music. On the back, "La Feria," an inspiring Spanish bull-ring march. A-6114—$1.25

The 39 new Columbia selections for October include 4 popular songs by Grand Opera and concert stars, 12 other popular songs, 2 band pieces, 2 symphony orchestra selections, 2 saxophone solos, 2 hymns, 1 violin solo, 1 piano solo in 2 parts, 1 novelty record in two parts, and 12 dances.

WOMAN DROWNED IN CREEK IN COUNTY

Sister Says Resident of Normandy Had Poor Sight and Thinks She Stumbled.

Mrs. Hannah Klaren, 54 years old, of Normandy, St. Louis County, was drowned in Clearwater Creek, near the Walton and St. Charles roads at 11 a. m. yesterday. Her body was recovered four hours later and was taken to Kirkwood where it was identified today by a brother, Eugene A. McSwiney of Normandy.

The drowning occurred near St. Joseph's orphan asylum, where a sister of Mrs. Klaren is one of the nuns who conduct the institution.

Miss Catherine A. McSwiney, Postmistress of Normandy, a sister of Mrs. Klaren, today said she believed the drowning was accidental, as her sister's eyesight was poor and she may have stumbled into the creek.

Simon Moser, a farmer living near the creek, told county authorities he heard a scream and saw Mrs. Klaren go into the water. She did not come to the surface. The stream was dragged and her body was found caught in driftwood.

THE REV. DR. RUSSELL RESIGNS

Accepts Call From Presbyterian Church at Berkeley, Cal.

The Rev. Dr. Francis W. Russell's pastoral relation with West Presbyterian Church, Maple and Maryville avenues, probably will be dissolved at a meeting to be held Wednesday night, Oct. 1. Yesterday he announced his resignation, to accept a call from St. John's Presbyterian Church of Berkeley, Cal.

He has been pastor of West Church for 15 years. The church building was greatly damaged by fire in 1917, and has since been reconstructed, with a new Sunday school annex.

Americans Reported Buying Silesian Mines.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Americans have bought extensive coal mines in Silesia, according to a Berlin dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. quoting Teschen advices.

The T. B. M.

Whether he always was a fake, or whether more comfortable home-furnishings let him relax, we don't know, but the fact is, a Tired Business Man is never so tired as he is after a vacation of strenuous effort to rest.

Personally, we believe release from platform rockers and hard little plush-covered sofas has extinguished the breed of the T. B. M. and much credit is due deliciously comfortable over-stuffed furniture and the vogue of the living-room as opposed to the "parlour."

In over-stuffed furniture, we feel no one can equal the excellence of what we have to offer.

You literally "sink in a chair with a sigh of relief" when the chair (or the davenport, as the case may be) is made in our splendid factory by men so skilled they know how tightly and just where each spring must be tied—how much of the best curled hair must underlie the top layer of down and how much down is needed to preserve the beauty and contour of the chair after years of use by the mythical, but generally weighty T. B. M.

We have limited facilities in our factory—limited to the most expert labor and by a scarcity of the best materials, so we have a rigid rule that assures your order taking its turn. This is just a little word to the wise—usually sufficient.

TAUSSIG BELIEVES HIGH PRICE LEVEL HAS BEEN REACHED

Harvard University Professor and Noted Economist Says, However, Return to Normal Will Be Slow.

BELIEVES CURRENCY MUST BE DEFLATED

Declares Production Must Be Increased—Is in St. Louis in Interest of Proposed $16,000,000 Fund.

The peak of high prices has been reached, in the belief of Prof. Frank W. Taussig, economist of national repute, who is in St. Louis today in the interest of the proposed $16,000,000 fund for Harvard University.

Prof. Taussig, when seen by a Post-Dispatch reporter at the home of his cousin, Benjamin J. Taussig, 3747 Washington boulevard, said he believed the year 1919, nearly three-fourths of which has now passed, would mark the high level of prices. "I would not venture to say," he added, "that the peak has been reached this week or this month, but it has been reached in this year." He predicted that the return to normal conditions would be slow, and said the world must deflate its currency and increase its production to remedy the present difficulty.

Native of St. Louis.

Prof. Taussig, who is a son of the late Dr. William Taussig, is a native of St. Louis, and has been connected with Harvard University as student and teacher since 1879, except for the last three years, which he has spent in public service in Washington. He was chairman of the Tariff Commission from its establishment in 1916 until he resigned last month. He was vice chairman of the Prize-Fixing Committee of the War Industries Board, of which Robert S. Brookings of St. Louis was chairman. He is a director of the Sugar Equalization Board, the Government corporation which has assumed supervision of sugar distribution. He was attached to the Peace Commission at Paris, and was chairman of the International Committee which prepared the tariff clauses of the peace treaty. He is now about to return to his work in the department of economics at Harvard.

He was accompanied here by Eliot Wadsworth, lately chairman of the Central Committee of the American Red Cross in Washington, who, with Thomas S. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co., is managing the Harvard campaign. The object of this campaign, it is announced, is to enable Harvard University to continue as a going concern, and to meet the increased expenses of the institution and its instructors.

The visitors conferred last evening with a committee of Harvard men, and will address a dinner gathering tonight, at the University Club. They came here from Kansas City, having previously visited Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and they will leave tonight for Cincinnati, with later stops in Pittsburg and New York scheduled.

"The cost of living has brought a crisis to all educational institutions," Prof. Taussig said. "My judgment, as an economist, is that the fundamental cause of the extreme increase in prices is the money inflation which was a by-product of the war.

"Germany's case was extreme, but typical. Plans were laid, and laws drafted, ready to be enacted by the Reichstag immediately upon the outbreak of the war, for a great issue of paper money, to be used in financing the war and supporting business. Germany thought the war would be short and decisive, and that she could get a huge indemnity, so that she could withdraw and redeem the paper before it had done much harm.

"At present Germany is in the slough of paper money depreciation, and there is no telling how or when she will get out. The great European countries have had similar experiences, though less extreme. France, every six months, owing to the war, made hand-to-mouth arrangements which involved great issues of notes by the Bank of France. England did not go quite so far, and resorted to taxation more quickly, but England also made a great issue of paper money.

Better Off in U. S.

"We in the United States have maintained the gold standard, and in so far are better off than the allies. But $1,000,000,000 of gold was sent into the United States by the allies during the early part of the war, toward payment for our exports, and since we entered the war we have very much enlarged our currency and our system of bank credits.

"This universal increase in the supply of money is the fundamental cause of the high cost of living. Other things have played some part. The extraordinary European demand for munitions and for our foodstuffs has affected articles of that kind in the United States, and no doubt there has been some profiteering.

"In my judgment the peak has been reached, and the tendency hereafter is more likely to be toward declining prices than toward advancing prices. I would not venture to say that the peak has been reached this week or this month, but it has been reached in the year 1919. It is impossible to say how soon or how great will be the trend the other way.

"In any case, we shall not get back to prevailing conditions for a long, long time, certainly not for a decade or two. The world has to adjust itself to a new and higher monetary scale. Sooner or later, all salaries and other slowly changing incomes will have to be readjusted. People often talk of fixed incomes. What is really meant is incomes which change slowly. Such are the incomes of almost all city and Government employes, salaried men and teachers of all kinds, from the public school grades to the university professor.

"Everybody admits that education is of the first importance to the country, but people are only just beginning to realize that mounting prices,

Woman's Faith Helps Husband

"I owe my good health to my wife, who had faith in a newspaper ad she saw of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. I was down so badly with stomach and liver trouble after 15 years of suffering and trying every known remedy that I had no faith in anything. This medicine has certainly been a 'God-send' to me." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. TAUSSIG BELIEVES HIGH PRICE LEVEL HAS BEEN REACHED with stationary incomes, keep out of the teaching profession the men and women whom the country ought to have in it. Our cities must increase the salaries of their public school teachers, and our State universities and the great endowed universities must increase the salaries of instructors and professors. I am here to focus the attention of our Harvard friends in St. Louis on this situation."

As to the remedy for high prices, Prof. Taussig said:

"The main remedy is readjustment of the volume of money to the volume of production. All the world must stop issuing more money, and must begin the process of deflation, instead of inflation. On the other side, all the world must turn to more abundant production, especially of foodstuffs and necessaries, and of the plant and the tools to enable production of necessaries to become greater.

"Legal regulation of profiteering is well enough, but it only scratches the surface of the problem.

Can't Maintain Exports.

"It is impossible to maintain the enormous excess of exports which we have had. We cannot keep up either the extraordinary volume of exports which we had during the war, or the extraordinary loans to foreign countries which we made during the war. Our exports will be large and important, and we shall make some further credit advances to European countries, but neither of these can be on any scale comparable to that of the war period. Our exports will decline and our imports will advance, until something like a normal relation is restored.

"Some sort of settlement of the railroad problem will have to be reached within the next two or three years. It can be settled in only two ways. One is the consolidation of all the railroads of the country into a comparatively small number of large and well-knit systems, which must be recognized as public utilities and quasi-public institutions, closely connected with the Government, and subject to administrative and financial control by the Government. The alternative is complete Government ownership and management. I will not undertake to predict which of these two ways will be followed, but the sooner the decision is reached, the better. Yet I fear it will not be reached until after the presidential election of 1920. The rehabilitation of the railways is one of the crying needs of the country, and is of the greatest importance in the development of production."

"SCANDAL" A MESS OF MELODRAMA AND FARCE

Bedroom Scene Dispenses Shocks in Stage Performance at Jefferson.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

"SCANDAL" is the name conservatively given to the mess of melodrama and farce, vapidly vulgar and remote from plausibility, which is staged at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater this week.

As the bills proclaim, it is not a moving picture—but it ought to be. Every day that it is kept off the screen it is away from home. Last night's large audience seemed to like it. To enjoy, or even to tolerate such a play requires preparation, and this preparation has been given by the "frank" and "soul-revealing" sort of films, and by the bedroom farces of the stage.

Truly, the purchasing power of the dollar has declined, and the purchasing power of $2 has shrunk even more, when first-class prices can be collected by one, not the first, of a group of companies presenting this play. Except for the leading woman, Ann Winston, who gave the impression that she would be excellent in straight farce, the company is not one of distinction. Herbert Ranson is monumentally miscast in a part which calls for cave-man speeches.

Oh, Those Idle Rich!

However, $2 is nothing to the idle rich, and if there are any such in St. Louis, they should see "Scandal" and learn what they are supposed to resemble. The people in the play are lavishly endowed with riches and idleness. Beatrix, whom everyone calls a spoiled child, must "see life" by visiting a painter's studio at 9:45 p. m. Franklin, in the apartment across the hall, tries to get Beatrix to go home, but has to leave when she refuses, and her relatives break in and find her alone with the painter. When her mother and aunt begin to talk about a season of penance in Maine for Beatrix, she sends for Franklin, and declares that he, not the painter, has been the object of her visits, and that she and Franklin have been married secretly. This is just an "inspiration" of hers, as there has been no marriage.

Think of telling that story and having it swallowed with never a "When?" or a "Where?" or a "By whom?" These embarrassing queries come later in the columns of a scandal sheet. Any actual mother, uncle and maiden aunt would ask them, and get them answered before taking the man home, and beaming on the preparations for the big bedroom scene of act 2.

Act 2 serves to remind us how much Shakspeare might have improved "The Taming of the Shrew" by introducing a bedroom scene. Perhaps the Elizabethan censor wouldn't let him.

Passing over act 2, in which Beatrix is compelled to "undress" by taking off a gown which does not cover her body and putting on a nightdress which does, we come to the curtain lines, spoken by Franklin to Beatrix after she has tucked herself in bed: "If you and I were the only living people on a desert island, and there was not the faintest hope of our being taken back to the world, I would build you a hut at the farthest end of it, and treat you as a man." Act 3 is devoted to demonstrating that he did not mean this.

In Cosmo Hamilton's book, from which this play is made, there was a siren who hurled herself at Franklin's head in a lurid chapter. The siren does not appear in the play, perhaps because capable vampires are expensive, or are all in the movies. Instead, the shocks are scattered through the dialogue in carefully measured portions, such as the remarks of Beatrix's uncle while inspecting the pseudo-bridal suite.

Clear your complexion completely with Resinol Soap

If you find yourself "left out" because of a poor skin, and want a clear, fresh complexion, use Resinol Soap at least once a day. Wash thoroughly with a warm, creamy lather of it, then rinse the face with plenty of cold water.

It does not often take many days of such regular care with Resinol Soap to show an improvement. In severe cases, a little Resinol Ointment should be used at first. All druggists sell Resinol Soap and Ointment.

How to Banish Wrinkles and Crow's Feet Quickly

If your face is disfigured with wrinkles, no matter what the cause, you can quickly dispel every line, even the most obstinate, by using a simple, homemade wash lotion. Merely dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel—ingredients found in any drug store. Bathe the face in this, and—presto!—you scarcely believe your own eyes when you look into your mirror and behold the marvelous transformation!

The remarkable astringent action of the saxolite so tightens the skin, wrinkles are literally pressed out. Best of all, this result is not purely temporary, for the lotion also has a healthful tonic action, which tends to strengthen and tone up the weakened tissue, and added benefit may be expected with continued use. Use this once a day for awhile; it cannot injure the most delicate skin. The treatment itself leaves no trace—no one guesses the secret of your increasing youthful appearance.—ADV.

FIRE IN U. S. CAMP IN FRANCE

PARIS, Sept. 22.—A large fire started this morning in the American military camp at Miramas and in the evening the nitrate depots and gunpowder factories at St. Chama, which are relatively near the seat of the conflagration, had been reached by the flames.

Later the fire was brought under control, having been confined to the American camp and industries connected with it. The loss will be considerable. The gunpowder factory at St. Chama was saved.

PATRICIA COLLINGE STARS IN "TILLIE"

Play of Revolt Against Bigotry Touches and Diverts Large Audience.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

THE revolt of an individual against established superstition has been the theme of many a tragedy both of life and of the theater, the classic example in the latter field being the "Antigone" of Sophocles. A slight but genuine strain, deriving from this high ancestry, ennobles the four-act comedy, "Tillie," which arrived at the American Theater last night. The play brings a message for heart and brain which is sincerely if not overwhelmingly moving—a compliment not a little startling to the public in the present heyday of musical comedies and boudoir farces.

The scene is "the willage of Schneiderwille, Pennsylwania," habitat of the descendants of those Mennonites who in the Sixteenth century suffered at the stake in Switzerland, Holland and South Germany, and who found a refuge in the commonwealth of William Penn. If we are to believe the author, Mrs. Helen R. Martin, the Mennonites still preserve, along with their quaintly literal rendering of German idioms into English; the corrosive traits usually engendered by persecution—bigotry, cruelty and hypocrisy masquerading under a guise of saintliness. These apostolic villagers have an inquisition of their own, by which they ruthlessly administer the rack and thumbscrew not to the body but the soul.

Against this darkness there begins miraculously to glimmer a feeble rush-light of aspiration in the heart of a young girl, daughter of the most odious of the fanatics. The tender flame is not nourished by loving hands, but must struggle with touching desperation against the blast of intolerance that would extinguish it. The indestructible fire kindles higher and higher, and is presently fanned to such a blaze, by the advent of a "foreign" and enlightened youth from Harvard, that the heroine rises to the height of defying her church and all its works. For the sake of a happy ending, she is enabled to elope with her teacher to a region where the holy cease from troubling.

Rogues' Gallery of the Saints.

Such is the core of the play, a bit overlaid, it may be, by the author's insistence upon portraying in bountiful and comic detail the character of her Mennonites. Their ludicrous superstitions are pictured with an unsparing brush. Even the gentlest sister of the sect finds infinite relish in twanging through voluptuous nostrils hymns that rejoice in the total ldepravity of mankind. The new teacher is rigorously cross-questioned as to his religious persuasion by a black-garbed tribunal of elders—an ordeal not without embarrassment for a Harvard graduate; and is branded with eternal damnation because, in addition to frequenting the movies, he is so abandoned, according to the horrifying disclosures of his washerwoman, as to don a clean suit of underwear every morning. Tillie is "set back" —or anathematized by the church— because she treads the primrose path of reading "Hiawatha," walks brazenly abroad with the teacher on the Sabbath, and, fleshliest of all, permits those snares of Satan, her curls, to peep from under her prim cap.

Delightfully cast in the part of the heroine is Patricia Collinge, who brings to it a charm of personality that instantly subjugates an audience, a dulcet voice, humor, tenderness, pathos and, above all, a radiance of character, a vestal starriness of spirituality, which illumine her face and shine from her candid eyes. The role itself is an immense advance over the syrupy Pollyanna of her earlier days, and she rises eagerly to its increased possibilities. The young actress received an ovation at the end of the third act from the numerous audience, which insisted upon a curtain speech.

A Picturesque Cast.

Next to her in favor is John W. Ransome, of "Prince of Pilsen" fame, in the part of that jovial and sentimental old quack, "Doc" Weaver, who keeps his schnapps in a vial labeled "arsenic," and who finds that he has been an eclectic all his life without knowing it. A picturesque aggregation of thespians has been assembled to impersonate the Mennonite characters, among them Jennie Dickerson, Mildred Booth, Edward Waldman, Kraft Walton, Helen Weatherby and, last but not least, Elliott Nugent as Tillie's lordly Mennonite suitor, whose idea of generosity is to present his bride with a washing-machine on the wedding day.

Reed Hamilton is cast in the by no means facile role of the knight errant from Harvard. Henry Adams, himself a graduate and professor of that university, complained in his "Education" that its students pursue the ideal of sweetness to the injury that of light. Hamilton is true to the type, but the type tends to become cloying. The writer recalls an instructor of English at Harvard who was sickened by the quality expressed in such phrases as "nice Harvard manners," and "nice Harvard boys." He had found in the Harvard library a novel which spoke of someone's "nice Harvard way," and quoted with grim approval a scholium scribbled in the margin by some unregenerate undergraduate. It was: "Oh, hell!"

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 22.—Cardinal Mercier celebrated pontifical mass in the Cathedral yesterday. The Belgian primate walked from Cardinal Gibbons' home to the cathedral. Dr. Thomas A. Le Breton, Ambassador from the Argentine Republic and a delegation from the Belgian embassy attended.

Bishop John C. Carroll said in his sermon: "May we not hope that the league of nations, imperfect and unsatisfactory as it is, may be the means under God's providence for bringing the peoples of the world closer together."

The Belgian primate, accompanied by Cardinal Gibbons, visited Notre Dame College in the afternoon.

HINES WARNS OF CAR SHORTAGE

Says Movement Must Be Expedited to Meet Reviving Business Demands.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Warning of a serious car shortage unless every effort is made to expedite the movement of equipment is given by Director-General Hines. Calling on shippers to continue co-operation which made them so "patriotically helpful" during the war, Hines said that, despite the delivery of more than 900 new cars to the railroads each working day, reviving business was making demands which could not be met without obtaining the greatest possible utility from the existing limited facilities.

FALL MOVIE SEASON HAS A FINE OPENING

Evangeline, Fatty Arbuckle, "The Brat" and New Talmadge Farce on the Bills.

A production of great scenic beauty and considerable dramatic charm is the film version of Longfellow's "Evangeline" which went on for a week's engagement yesterday at the Liberty.

Miriam Cooper, an actress of a type of beauty which has caused her to be called "the Madonna of the screen" has the title role and she plays it with rare sympathy and understanding. The cast throughout is a good one and the photography fine.

The story follows the poem very closely, showing the banishment of the peaceful Arcadians and Evangeline's search for her lost Gabriel. It is a pardonable deviation from the text for the movie adapter to give the story a less somber ending than Longfellow gave it.

Nazimova in "The Brat" is the week's attraction at the Pershing, Kings, Juniata, Shenandoah, Lindell and Grand Florissant. Here is a movie play which is distinctly different from any in which this great emotional actress has yet appeared. She has the role of an American girl who travels the unusual route from the estate of a waif of the streets to that of a gorgeous young "society" woman, stopping off at several way stations on the upward journey. As an asylum inmate her theatrical talent is discovered when she is unexpectedly called upon to substitute for a trained performer. Her rabbit costume and dance here gave us a new view of the Nazimova of many moods.

An unusually full and varied bill marked the West End Lyric's opening of its regular fall and winter season yesterday. The top-liner is Fatty Arbuckle in his first "big four" comedy "Back Stage." The elephantine funster seems to be in his own element in a swift-moving burlesque showing what goes on behind the scenes of the theatrical boards.

Other features on the West End Lyric bill are Marguerite Clark in "Widow by Proxy," an amusing farce drama, and a film showing the life of Gen. Pershing fro mhis boyhood days in Laclede, Mo., until his return from the great world war. Several shorter features complete the program.

At the New Grand Central the prime attraction is Constance Talmadge in "A Temperamental Wife," a comedy of the swift-moving sort which is this youthful star's chosen vehicle. Here she has the role of a young woman who vows that the husband of her choice must be insensible to the charms or wiles of any other woman. She picks the husband and then she finds in his pocket a letter from another woman, and of course this speeds up the action. The play was written by John Emerson and Anita Loos and it marks Miss Talmadge's first appearance as a star of the First Exhibitors' National Circuit. On the remainder of the bill are an unusually good comedy and other interesting features.

"The Miracle Man," after running three weeks at the New Grand Central, went on at the Central yesterday and drew big houses. It will run theer a week or longer. At Koplar's Royal the leading attraction is "As a Man Thinks," an adaptation of a stage play of the same name by Augustus Thomas.

LIBERTY BONDS ARE EXPECTED TO SHOW INCREASE IN VALUE

Belief in Washington Is Due to Excellent Condition of Government's Fiscal Program.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Steady increase in the market value of Liberty bonds and the maintenance of an interest rate not greater than 4¼ per cent on future issues of Government certificates are expected in treasury circles to result from the excellent condition of the Government's fiscal program.

Purchases of treasury and tax certificates have been so brisk in recent issues that the treasury closed the last issue very hurriedly last Thursday when the general funds had reached $1,445,931,452 and there was no immediate use for any more money. There were no outstanding certificates to be redeemed at par, the 4½ per cent selling at a premium on that day.

Interest was aroused by the larger sale in the last issue of the long term, or one year certificates, as compared with the six months certificates. The public demanded the former in an amount six times greater than the latter, doubtless because the interest rate of 4½ per cent was believed to be higher than will be paid on forthcoming issues.

With the rate on new Government securities being reduced, Liberty bonds paying a higher return began to mount in price, the advance being helped also by Secretary Glass' recent statement that the turn in war financing has come. Since Liberty bonds in many cases can be bought so as to pay 5 per cent on the investment, purchases have increased materially, leading to the belief that they have reached their lowest levels and will enhance in price from now on.

SECURITIES IN NEW YORK STEADY EARLY

Resistance Shown at Opening, but Buying Power Is Not Vigorous.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"While it is always dangerous to draw confident conclusions from the first day of a strike, today's news from the steel trade centers certainly did not indicate a sweeping initial victory by the unions, and the stock market acted accordingly. After some early irregularity and a few introductory declines, recovery became general. United States Steel shares opened a small fraction higher, declined nearly a point then advanced to a price nearly 2 points over Saturday's closing. The rest of the market followed this lead. As might have been expected the "miscellaneous industrials" indulged in some spectacular advances, suited to the emotional character of their market.

After a brief movement against the markets of our European allies, foreign exchange moved somewhat sharply in their favor; the sterling rate touching 4.15½, as against 4.14¾ at last week's closing and a recent low rate of less than 4.13. All other exchange markets advanved, but the noteworthy movement was in the rate on Germany, which reached 4.20 cents to the mark as against Saturday's closing rate of 4.02 and a low level of 3¾ on the 10th. There appears to have been considerable buying of marks, of a speculative character; based no doubt on the fact that they were already so abnormally low as apparently to admit of little more depreciation. No doubt this may be a good speculative venture; but the German indemnity is yet to be financed, and for some time to come, Germany will have to buy muhc more merchandise in America than she can sell to us.

From today's report on the country's foreign trade in August it will be seen that the lately prevalent theory that the decrease previous months decrease in exports meant a radical change in the situation, were at least somewhat premature. The outward trade of July was less by $348,000,000 than those of June, but the August exports are now shown to have been increased $34,000,000 over July, and are in fact larger than in any other previous month except June, April and January of this year and January of 1917. What is not less interesting, the import trade, which in July reached the highest monthly figure, was reduced $36,000,000 during August. It still is larger than in any month but three of our previous history; but the surplus of exports for the month was nearly $40,000,000 beyond that of August, 1918, and the surplus for the eight completed months of the present year actually foots up a thousand million dollars over the corresponding period of the year preceding.

Last week's consolidated statement of the Federal Reserve system, together with the announcement of subscriptions booked for the latest offering of treasury certificates, issued in anticipation of taxes, throw considerable light on last Saturday's report of the Clearing House Banks. The increase of $243,000,000 in loans at the associated banks would be accounted for partly by borrowing to meet the instalment of income taxes due last week, but principally it would represent the financings of the treasury's new tax certificates. The amount placed, exceeding $776,000,000, was surprisingly large, while purchases of more than $400,000,000 in this district would compare with $225,000,000 had the old ratio of 30 per cent, established during the Liberty Loan campaigns, held good.

The Reserve bank statement reveals other effects of the week's treasury operations, as in the reduction of $140,000,000 in amount of Government "war paper" rediscounted, this curtailment being caused by the heavy redemption by the treasury last week of its short-term bills. It is interesting to note tha $45,479,000 of the gold previously "in transit" abroad had reached the Bank of England and is now transferred to the actual reserve account of the Federal banks, while the item of gold still in transit is reduced by a corresponding amount. There is really no mystery as to the part played by the New York bank in these transactions. While the gold was still in process of transfer, the whole amount was carried in the accounts of the New York bank as an asset, but once the metal has been earmarked at London and included in the reserves, the amount so disposed of is distributed, pro rata, among the 12 reserve banks.

The remainder, $114,000,000, not yet received, still appears on the balance sheet of the local bank.

DETAILED REPORT OF DAY'S TRADING IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (Wall Street, 10:30 a. m.)

Industrials were among the strongest issues at the irregular opening of today's stock market, dealings reflecting only in moderate degree the ushering in of the steel strike. U. S. Steel opened with running sales of 500 to 3000 shares at a maximum gain of ½ a point, but this was soon canceled. Bethlehem Steel advanced 1 point and Crucible Steel 3 points, the latter immediately adding 2 more, followed by a 4-point reaction. Shares closely related to the steel group, notably American and Baldwin Locomotives, advanced 1 to 2 points, and Tobaccos and Oils also recorded substantial gains.

The sustained strength of oil, tobacco and food shares carried the usual market leaders to higher prices at midday. United States Steel advanced to 102, other stocks of the same class also showing marked improvement with standard rails and shippings.

CORN MARKET HIGHER IN THE LATE SESSION

Short Covering Advances Prices About 3c—Oats Are on the Upturn.

Sentiment was much divided in grain at the opening of the local market today and initial dealings developed no broad price changes as contrasted with the close last week. News was in the main favorable to the selling side. There were further good rains over the growing belt and seasonable temperatures.

Cables indicated a less pressing demand in the United Kingdom for both corn and oats, and the foreign exchange situation remains in lamentable shape. Receipts at primary points were fair, all considered, but for the car shortage would doubtless augment Hogs at Chicago opened higher.

Little attention was paid to the steel strike by speculators in cereals The opening strength in New York, however, had some moral effect on grain.

This year the season is so far advanced on this crop that the usual anxiety prevailing at this time of the year about the crop escaping frost injury is not being felt. Much of the crop is in shock or in the silo. In some localities cribbing has commenced. It is still too early to say what the actual yield will be, but taking everything as a whole it is fair to assume that the crop will be well up to average.

Flour output of the following mills was 106,600 bbls last week, against 104,500 bbls the previous week, as follows: G. P. Plant Milling (City), 10,500; Standard-Tilton Milling Co. Alton, Ill., and Dallas, Tex.), 16,000; Kehlor Flour Mills Co. (East St. Louis, Ill.), 16,000; Sparks Milling Co. (Alton, Ill., and Terre Haute, Ind.), 14,500; Saxony Milling Co. (Ciy), 3000; John F. Meyer Milling Co. (Springfield, Mo.), 6000; Camp Spring Milling Co. (Nashville, Ill.), 3000; Hezel Milling Co. (East St. Louis, Ill.), 3600; J. F. Imbs Milling Co. (Belleville, Ill.) 5400; Bernet Craft and Kaufmann Milling Co. (Mount Carmel Ill.), 9000; Valier and Spies Milling Co. (4 mills), 16,000; Annan, Burg & Co. (City), 2000.

Corn receipts here today were 64,200 bu against 30,000 bu last year. Shipments, 12,000 bu against 28,000 bu last year. Oats receipts 166,000 bu against 68,000 bu. Shipments, 80,000 bu against 53,000 bu. Wheat receipts, 491,000 bu against 122,000 bu. Shipments, 228,000 bu against 232,000 bu.

Corn developed strength in the late market, shorts were covering here and at Chicago and prices walked upward, the close averaging 2¼c to 2¾c higher. Oats reflected the strength in corn and closed about 1c higher.

Broomhall's Argentine cable says demand for oats in the United Kingdom very disappointing and offerings are being pressed for sale. Foreign sorts appear to be in fair supply and native oats are also being put forward in larger quantities.

Forecast: Illinois and Missouri—Fair and cooler with probably frost in Wisconsin. Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Dakotas and Nebraska—Fair and warmer.

Clearances—Wheat 558,000 bu; corn none; oats 53,000 bu; flour 1000 bbls; wheat and flour 563,000 bu.

Visible wheat increase 7,552,000; corn increase 390,000; oats decrease 95,000.

NEW YORK COTTON MARKET NERVOUS IN EARLY TRADING

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The coton market was extremely nervous and unsettled during today's early trading. The cables were relatively steady, the rains reported in the South were considered unfavorable and the steel situation was also a factor. The opening was 8 to 22 points higher in consequence, with December selling at 30.30c on the call, but there was considerable Southern selling and scattering pressure, which caused reactions of 20 or 25 points shortly after the call.

The failure of the steel strike news to bring in more selling evidently made a more bullish impression on sentiment and the market was very strong late in the morning on the rains in the Southwest, with prospects for lower temperatures and bullish spot advices. December sold up from 30c to 30.88c, or 81 points net higher.

CHICAGO CORN PRICES UP, DUE TO STRENGTH OF HOGS

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Corn prices moved upward today as a result of covering by shorts who took the position that the bearish effects of the steel strike had been discounted beforehand. Strength of prices in the hog market and in Wall street tended also to lift corn values. Trade was not large. Opening figures, which ranged from the same as Saturday's close to 1¼c higher, with December $1.22⅝ to $1.23 and May $1.21 to $1.21¼, were followed by a slight reaction and then by a substantial upturn all around.

Oats ascended with corn. After opening unchanged to ¼ higher, including December at 69c, the market sagged a little, and then rose higher than at first.

Provisions were governed by the action of grain and hogs. Initial prices, though, showed weakness owing to considerable scattered selling.

Late there was persistent buying for commission houses. Offerings were light, and further gains ensued. The market closed strong, 3c to 3¼c net higher, with December $1.25⅝ to $1.25¾ and May $1.23⅝ to $1.23⅞.

"C.SHABILITY" IS NEW WORD USED I.. U. S. SAVINGS CAMP..N

Treasury Dep.rtment Seeks to Sell $2,500,000 in Certificates in 8th Missouri District by Jan. 1.

"Cashability" is a new word which is being used in announcements of the Savings Division of the U. S. Treasury Department in the campaign now on to sell $2,500,000 of the new Treasury $100 and $1000 savings certificates before Jan. 1, in the Eighth Federal Reserve Missouri District. "Safety, Cashability and Good Interest" are the three big features of the new certificates, the "cashability" referring to the provision of the securities which permits redemption in case of emergency, two months after purchase, at cost price plus interest due at 3 per cent.

The certificates if held to maturity in 1924 will bear 4 per cent interest compounded quarterly. A $100 certificate which may be bought this month for $84 will be redeemed for $100 Jan. 1, 1924, and the $1000 certificate costing $840 this month will be worth $1000 Jan. 1, 1924. Bankers and trust company heads are recommending the new savings certificates as one of the best forms of investment the Government has ever offered, and it is expected the St. Louis quota of $500,000 will be easily disposed of.

U. S. ROAD COMMISSION ADVOCATED BY SPEAKER

Chairman of Federal Highway Council Addresses Chamber of Commerce.

Creation of a Federal Highway Commission and the establishment of a national system of highways, as provided for in the Townsend bill now before the Senate, were advocated today by S. M. Williams of Washington, D. C., chairman of the Federal Highway Council, in an address at a luncheon given by the Chamber of Commerce and commercial organizations at Hotel Statler.

The Townsend bill proposes the appropriation of $425,000,000 for the construction and maintenance of Federal roads for interstate traffic. The commission would be composed of three members, appointed by the President, and would devote all of its time to the work. At present this work is under the Office of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture. Williams advocates the creation of a commission as it would place the Federal roads in the hands of a separate body.

Era of Road Transportation.

"This country is entering an era of great highway transportation," Williams said. "National roads, which will be the backbone of a system, must be established. Such a system cannot be obtained without a Federal commission with power to act."

"With Federal aid the states are building a net work of roads. But it is as impossible to get a national system that way as it is to build a trunk line railroad from branch lines. The Federal Highway Council is not against Federal aid. What we want the Government to do is to build national roads and then the states would take advantage of Federal aid to build lateral and branch roads."

He said that Missouri would have a difficult time in the matter of highway construction because no definite policy had been decided upon. He would not say specifically what he considered the best type of road, but explained that he believed in only two types of roads—the highest type that could be constructed, and if that was impossible then the cheapest type, which could be replaced when the community obtained funds.

Economic Conditions Create Need.

"At this moment you are building a link between your city and Terre Haute, Ind., which once was included in a national project. It was checked by the development of the steam railroad. In the years that intervened the railways have been developed. Gasoline engines have been fitted to vehicles on the public roads and today we find the national highway project again before us, not as a pet theory but as a hard fact, created by economic conditions and an astounding growth of freight tonnage and passenger traffic. The Travelers' Protective Association, which has headquarters in your city, five years ago went on record as in favor of this national system proposition.

"Creating a Federal highway commission and the construction of national trunk lines is another step in the principle co-operation which now exists between the State and the nation. It is simply the natural and logical result of national growth and that growth has now brought us to a point where roads must be classified. The bulk of the road mileage will be constructed by the State and counties, the Federal Government improving only a very small percentage of the total mileage consisting of the main trunk lines. It is therefore important that a plan be laid out as soon as possible co-ordinating the units into a general plan. Every state and every county should formulate a plan of roads to be constructed and maintained along definite lines and spend its money in a systematic way in carrying out this plan.

"The personnel of the State highway department is constantly changing, and in a more or less degree the State highway systems are changed with the changing of officials. It is therefore, out of the question to expect any connected system of roads between the 48 units, over which is no supervisory power or anyone with authority to bring these 48 units into accord, or to direct them in improving those roads which would form a national system."

Williams did not sponsor any of the proposed national highways. These, at this time, were not to be considered by the proposed commission, he said. No terminals were mentioned. The Townsend bill provides that no less than two per cent or more than five per cent of the total mileage highway be [illegible] one State.

REED PLANS ATTACK IN SENATE ON COVENANT OF LEAGUE

First Test of Strength Expected to Center Around Johnson Amendment.

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The second week of actual consideration of the peace treaty will open today, with both advocates and opponents of the league conceding the approach of the first actual test of strength. By the end of the week or early next week, both factions expect the first vote on amendment of the league covenant.

The Senate factions are to have their full voting strength on hand today to remain until the roll calls are reached. Little action is expected for a few days. Debate will be resumed today, Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, planning a lengthy address in attack upon the league covenant.

The first test of strength undoubtedly will center about the amendment of Senator Johnson, Republican, California, to give Great Britain and the United States equal voting power in the league assembly.

Your Mental Picture of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana)

IS it a thoroughly lubricated machine, owned and controlled by one man, who is able to manipulate it as he sees fit with figureheads to do his bidding by push button control?—

OR—

Is it an organization of men animated by ideals of service, human sympathies, and a far seeing understanding of conditions in a highly specialized branch of industry?

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is owned and controlled by 4649 stockholders, not one holding as much as 10 percent of the total stock.

It is managed by 7 men, who, individually, have won their way to the top by giving each day the kind of service which the public found it profitable to pay for.

The policy of the Company in its relation to the public is laid down by these 7 men, which is, to render the individual consumer in the eleven states served by the Company the kind of service they demand and find it profitable to pay for.

It is the earnest desire of these 7 men, holding the trusteeship of management, to intensify the usefulness to the public of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana), and to broaden the scope of its service so that the Company may discharge its obligations as a public servant in a manner satisfactory to the stockholders and beneficial to the world at large.

There will be offered at public auction to the highest bidder at McAlester, Oklahoma, on Nov. 13, 14 and 15, 1919, the coal and asphalt deposits, leased and unleased, underlying the surface of 399,004 acres of the segregated mineral land in the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, Oklahoma. The coal is bituminous and semibituminous, mainly of low volatile bunker coal for steamship use, high-grade domestic coal, railroad steam coal, high-grade blacksmith coal and cooking coal, seams averaging 4 feet thick, with an average dip of from 10 to 15 degrees outcropping at the surface and extending to a vertical depth below the surface estimated to be 2300 feet at the deepest part of the basin. Practically all of the 463 tracts to be offered are located near cities, towns and railroads, many being crossed by railroads, making them easily accessible and attractive for mining purposes. No person can acquire more than four tracts of 960 acres each, except where such person, firm or corporation has such tracts under existing valid leases. Bids must conform to tracts as advertised. No bids for fractional parts considered, nor for less than advertised minimum price. Bids may be made in person, by mail or by authorized agents. J. E. W.—If allotments are still being received by families whose men have been discharged from the army it is due to a failure of the discharge papers to reach the War Risk Insurance Bureau. Anyone cashing a Government warrant for allotment after the soldier has been discharged lays herself liable to criminal prosecution and will be compelled to refund the amount obtained. Each Government allotment warrant for months has carried a notice stating that if the soldier has been discharged the warrant should be returned to the War Risk Bureau. A soldier's pay is automatically stopped on his discharge, but there has been more or less delay and confusion in stopping the payment of allotments.

MRS. PANKHURST TELLS HER MISSION IN U. S.

Will Try Through Speeches to Interest Women in Reconstruction Problems.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, famous English suffrage leader, in an interview at Hotel Commodore, talking of her errand here, said: "I am going to Georgia in October to do some speaking. My talking will be directed to getting women to think of the reconstruction problems—to think rightly and constructively.

"The world now is face to face with theories and agitations, the aim of which is to do away with existing government and substitute other ideas. I shall submit that before we scrap the present Government it is only fair that women be permitted to try remedying its defects.

"I am not here as an agent of the British Government. I have no official mission. As long ago as 1917 I called the attention of the British Government to the dangers of Bolshevism and urged intervention in Russia at that time. I was in Russia when Kerensky was in power, and saw the seeds of Bolshevism planted.

Urges Greater Production.

"I believe in shorter hours of labor and greater opportunity for healthful diversion for everybody. But at present, with the war deficit off all necessities of life confronting us, the urgent need is increased production. Agitation for the shorter hours, which mean decreased production, should be put off until a stable basis for civilization is recovered.

"Woman with her vote may play a large part in keeping the world in the right channel at this time. She has had it so short a time that thus far she hasn't shown how she is going to use the ballot. In England women have voted in only one election.

Attitude on "Classes."

"When the government voluntarily gave us the vote we accepted it gratefully, even though we were not accorded the equality of suffrage we had been demanding. The ballot in our country, you know, is restricted to married women and to those of 30 or more. We believe there should be no other restrictions for women than are imposed upon man, and that equality is bound to come. Our group however, is not concerning itself about that matter at present. There are much more urgent questions.

"In the one election in which English women have used the vote the great majority of them gave their support to the Coalition Government. They reasoned that it had been intrusted with the burden of the war and should have the opportunity of meeting the problems of the reconstruction period.

"I particularly dislike the thought of 'classes' as the word is used. There ought not to be any classes. But if the choice must be made between the proletariat and the Bourgeoisie, as the Bolshevists call them doesn't it seem as if we could better do without the proletariat? After all, it is the Bourgeoisie who have set the higher standards of living and thinking today."

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Civic League's U. R. Plan.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A clumsy attempt at ridicule is a weapon sometimes found serviceable when facts fail. Such attempts without facts are always the favorite instrument of special pleaders for special privilege. They are the line of argument used by a certain class of lawyers who have no valid case in court.

The Globe-Democrat has hit upon this discredited tactic in dealing with the Civic League report on municipal ownership of the street railway system. It dismisses the idea of public ownership with a strained effort at comedy. But what has this paper, if not municipal ownership, to offer for the relief of the St. Louis car-riding public? Nothing at all; except, undoubtedly, a return to the old regime of reckless financing and speculation. For, the Globe-Democrat has always stood on the side of special privilege in the street railway question. In turn, it defended the compromise ordinances and sought to foist them on the people of St. Louis, mildly excused the referendum burglary, and opposed the receivership, which has disclosed the waste and extravagance going on in the company. Certainly, the serious situation of the street railways throughout the country, and the burdens which they are placing on the car-riding public, cannot be set aside with a mere plea in evasion What are the facts? That all the schemes devised to bolster up private ownership, and the speculation which goes with private ownership, have been shown utter failures when put to the test. During the last ten years the utilities, in order to cover their water-logged condilion, contrived the so-called "settlement" ordinances, which they attempted to put through in all the large cities of the country. The 1907 Chicago ordinance, calling for a board of control and "city participation in profits," and the Kansas City "partnership" ordinance were set up as "models." Our own "compromise" ordinances were copied after them (being a little worse on the city in some provisions); ordinance No. 1 following the Kansas City plan and ordinance No. 2 the Chicago plan.

The Post-Dispatch, the labor unions, and the Civic League opposed these ordinances from the beginning. The committee of the league denounced the former as "a hybrid arrangement" and showed that both were merely schemes to cover up speculation and give it full play. Today, all of these criticisms have been borne out by the experience of the cities which were "persuaded" to accept arrangements of this kind. Kansas City, both from Chamber of Commerce and labor unions, has declared its ordinance a failure. In Indianapolis (under the guiding hand of the State Public Service Commission) it was put into effect, and in three weeks the representatives of the public, including a representative of the Chamber of Commerce, resigned, denouncing the company and the speculators in control.

And Chicago, the leader of them all? Mr. Charles K. Mohler tells the facts in the Chicago situation in an article in the current National Municipal Review. His concrete facts and figures show that "the famous 1907 traction settlement has permitted the steady inflation of capitalization to a point so far above true value that a five-cent fare can no longer carry the burden, and any solution that is fair to the city must mean great losses to the investors." About this ordinance he further says: "Under expert advice and legal sanction, the city of Chicago has allowed financial exploitation of the traction properties and suffered from bad service, almost, if not quite equal to, that experienced under the regime of C. T. Yerkes. What Chicago seems to need most of all in connection with its traction problem, is the application of sturdy constructive thought and honesty of purpose, in the interests of the traveling public, rather than to help out reckless or dishonest financial interests. This does not mean new franchise grants, trustee plans, leasing plans, etc., but public ownership and operation of transportation on a sound, honest, unselfish, civic-spirted basis."

The above conforms to the facts all over the country. The facts, clearly presented to the people, will lead to one inevitable conclusion. Calm, dispassionate study of the situation is what we need. Let there be more light, less heat—and less meaningless, clumsy attempts at ridicule.

Red Cross Efficiency.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Many thanks for your splendid editorial in regard to the efficiency of the Red Cross in times of disaster. I think the note that you struck in your editorial was most convincing and timely. We certainly do not want to be guilty of maintaining an organization unless there is real need for it, and if the appeals of many communities who want the Red Cross to develop a Peace Time Program can be relied upon, we are treading on safe ground when we seek to revamp the organization to meet those appeals. Your editorial encourages us very much.

ALFRED FAIRBANK,
Manager Southwestern Division.

THE JAPANESE BUGABOO.

The Japanese peril has arrived in the Mississippi Valley, much to our alarm. Congressman William B. McKinley of Illinois, addressing the East St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, is reported as saying:

> The Japs are great soldiers, and if they ever get a chance to organize their full martial strength they can run over the entire world. You and I may not live to see this, but it may happen in 25 years.
> We constitute the strong nation of the world and I am not afraid that England or France will do anything antagonistic to peace, but Japan must not be allowed to organize a great army to overrun the world.

The concrete lessons of the recent war mean nothing to Congressman McKinley, evidently. If that conflict proved anything, it demonstrated conclusively that back of a fighting army in the field must be a still greater army of industrial workers, an almost unlimited supply of raw materials, food and ships almost without number. It is of no significance to those who get into a panic when the word Japan is mentioned that the factories of the United States can produce more in a week than Japan can in five years; that her iron mines, in 12 months, would not yield enough ore to supply ammunition for a week's fighting on the scale France sometimes witnessed; that all Japan's ships, even if her navy controlled the sea, could not transport 100,000 men to European or American waters and keep them supplied; and as for feeding, clothing and maintaining a huge army 5000 or more miles from her base of supplies—well, let Congressman McKinley ask some of the men in Washington who had to grapple with a similar task. But before even that could happen, Japan's navy would have to control and maintain possession of all the seas—a ridiculous assumption, at the best.

But what are facts when one wants to become frightened?

If, however, Mr. McKinley is really frightened at the menace of Japan, his logical course is to support the League of Nations with heart and soul. Under the peace covenant it would be impossible for Japan to make war on the United States or to take aggressive steps in that direction. She would have to face the opposition and the boycott of the nations of the world. A week's boycott would take all the fighting spirit out of Japan and drain her fighting resources.

WILL HIRAM THEN SECEDE?

The six votes of the British empire in the council of the League of Nations as against the one lone ballot to be cast by the United States is an infamy to which Hiram Johnson will never subscribe. It is true, as the President has explained, that our one vote is in every sense equal to Great Britain's six, since every motion before the council must poll a unanimous vote to carry; but adroitly avoiding the fact and shaking a belligerent fist at the figures, Hiram Johnson refuses to be appeased. Hiram is mad, and he intends to stay mad, at the unscrupulous and designing persons who perpetrated this outrage on American dignity.

Equality of representation, numerical as well as actual, it is inferred, is an immutable tenet of the Johnson creed. And with this inference one may wonder how Hiram Johnson has managed to reconcile himself to the perfidy of the framers of our own Constitution. Consider how they discriminated against Hiram's native State. Here is California, with its 3,000,000 people—to be exact, 2,983,843—a population greater than the combined populations of Nevada, Idaho, Arizona, New Mexico, with Utah and Vermont thrown in—and yet California has only two United States Senators, while the sparsely inhabited little postage-stamp patches just enumerated, have a round dozen Senators in the gathering.

It is possible that Hiram Johnson has very much the same grievance against the framers of our Constitution as he has against the delegates to the Versailles conference. And when he discovers it, as he is sure to do, for the inexorable facts cannot forever elude him, will Hiram secede from the Union in a whirl of exclamation points?

GEN. PERSHING AS A PARSER.

A story about how Gen. Pershing won his cadetship at West Point has become of wide currency. He and his chief rival in the competitive examination, a boy named Higginbotham, were so closely matched that the judges found it impossible to decide between them. Each was finally asked to parse the sentence, "I love to run." Both disposed of the first two words in the same manner. "To run," said Mr. Pershing, "object of verb." Higginbotham said, "'To run,' an infinitive phrase, qualifying the verb." Pershing's answer won him the appointment.

Still, there are linguists who to this day may insist that Higginbotham's answer revealed the more sympathetic appreciation of the genius of grammar and the sounder conception of basic grammatical principles applying, not to any one, but to all languages, whereas Pershing's answer may only have satisfied the fads of some particular writer on grammar as improvised from the English language, which is almost grammarless. Such trifles often prove a turning point for eventful, highly interesting careers. Gen. Pershing's grammar may have afforded no clew to his qualities of leadership, but those qualities were there. There isn't any doubt about his parsing the Germans to a standstill.

THE POET WHO TURNED FILIBUSTERER.

The Fiume raid of the Poet d'Annunzio answers almost exactly the dictionary definition of a filibustering expedition. It, of course, casts suspicion on the Italian Government and places it in a very delicate position. That is what makes it a typical filibustering expedition. The more delicate the position in which he can place a Government, especially his own Government, the better a true filibusterer is pleased.

D'Annunzio adds himself to a list of adventurers which included few poets, though some of them must have been of the poetic temperament. Conspicuous names in the list are those of Dr. Jameson, Narcisco Lopez, William Walker. That assassination has never changed the course of the world's history is one of civilization proverbs. In the same sense filibustering has not changed it. While they may be regarded as political symptoms, as publicity agencies directing attention to desirable alterations in the map, the place of such expeditions in the chain of events leading to important happenings is uncertain, at least disputed, and they have generally brought a dire fate on their leaders.

Dr. Jameson's raid on the Transvaal was an abject failure. The doctor was condemned to death, being spared only by the clemency of the Boers. His influence on the war that followed three years later is problematical. It probably would have come anyhow. William Walker met death in Honduras and Lopez in Cuba, freedom not coming to Cuba until 40 years later.

Filibustering was of such repute—a favorite outdoor sport of Americans in the first half of the last century was filibustering into Texas—that Lopez, sailing from New Orleans, offered the command of his third and fatal expedition on Cuba to Jefferson Davis, who suggested Robert E. Lee. The latter also refused.

Analogies are against success for D'Annunzio. If it ends his romantic career the world would be given double reason for regretting his foolhardy attempt.

RIVER TRAFFIC NECESSITIES.

G. A. Tomlinson, Director of the Division of Inland Waterways of the Railroad Administration, emphasises the urgent counsel of the Post-Dispatch that the representatives of Mississippi Valley interests demand from the Railroad Administration terminals and joint rates for river traffic before the return of the railroads to private ownership, which is scheduled for January next.

Mr. Tomlinson, basing his opinion upon his knowledge of waterway navigation and the record of the Government barge line, states unequivocally that with adequate rail and river terminals and rates the barge line, equipped with new barges and towboats, could score a success. It would be profitable.

He belittles the deficiency of the first year as of no significance, because the equipment was so unsatisfactory and its operation so costly, and because the line lacked terminals and joint rates. Its record was valuable in showing what might be done with adequate equipment and with terminals and joint rates, enabling it to draw freight from all parts of the valley and to distribute it to all parts of the valley.

Mr. Tomlinson puts terminals first, because he says the boats must have terminals in order to utilize rates, and granting rates without terminals might deceive and discourage shippers. It is true that the terminals must be provided before complete joint rates can be utilized, but it will take several months to arrange and publish the rates so that this work should be under way before the terminals are completed. The order for both should be obtained from the Railroad Administration before January. The rates can be put into effect on the completion of the terminals.

The course of the people of the Mississippi Valley is plain; they should demand of the Federal Railroad Administration both terminals and complete joint rates as necessities of profitable river traffic to handle valley freight and develop valley resources.

The Waterways Association is now organizing a representative delegation to make this demand. It should have the support of all the organizations of the valley. The demand should be pressed to a conclusion. The future of river traffic depends upon obtaining the terminals and rates from the Federal Railroad Administration before the roads go back to private ownership. Now or never.

Many protests are coming in that the increase in salaries in the school organization did not include the clerical, hygienic and other low-salaried workers. The rule of "To him that hath shall be given" appears to be followed in too many cases where a revision of payrolls is concerned.

ANENT CONGRESSMAN NEWTON.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Newton simply bided his time until the President of the United States started on his tour of the country to make a report of his stewardship to the people; then, on that self-same day, Newton, of Missouri, wagged. And he wagged in such a way as to demonstrate that whether or not the President was to occupy the front page in that day's news, Newton, of Missouri, was.

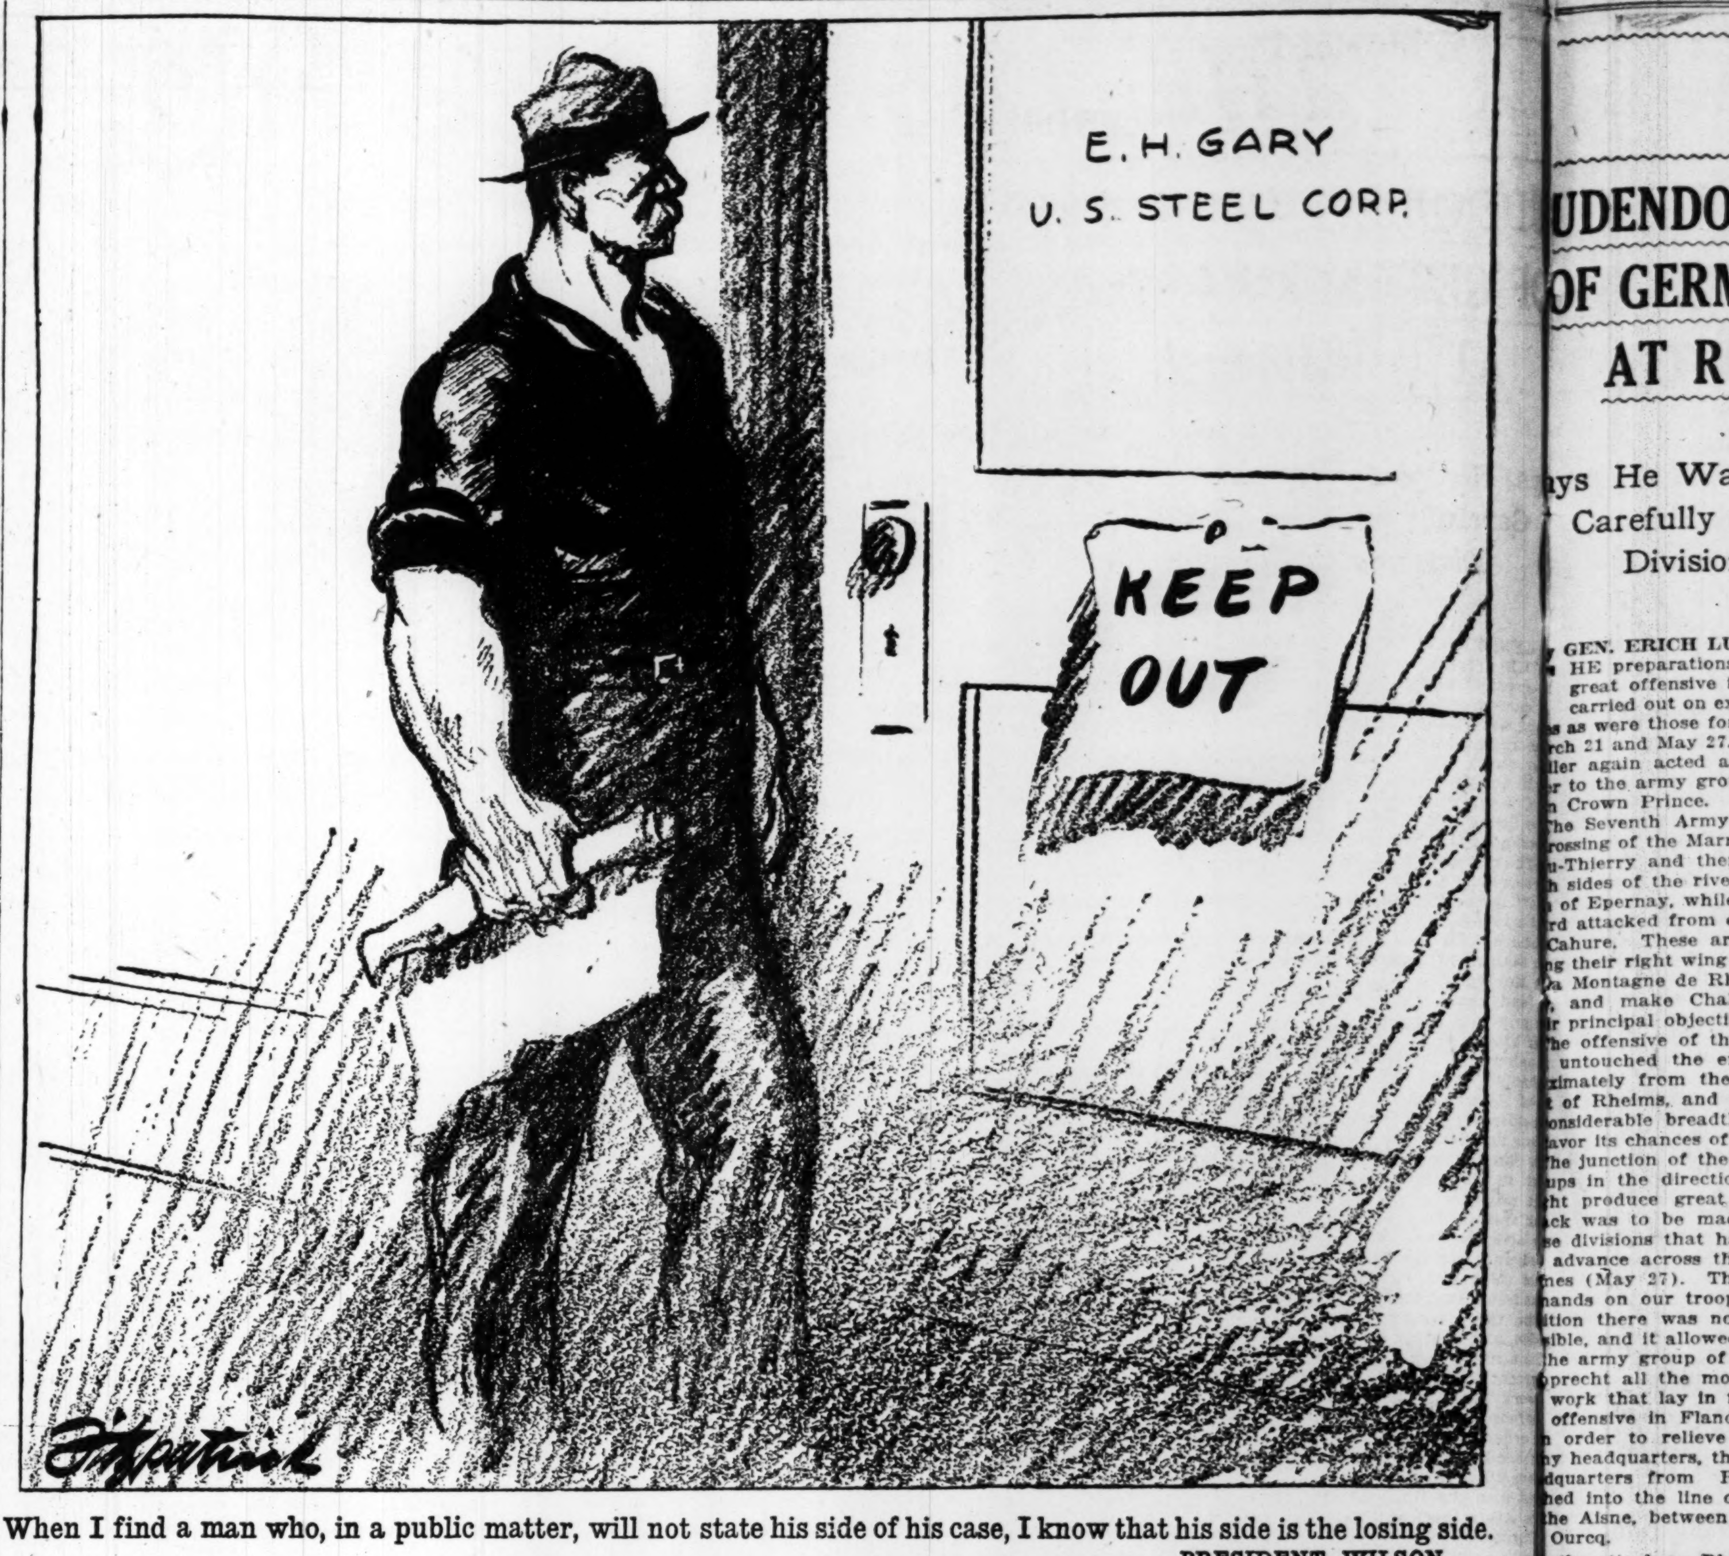
How simple it was! Just the properly primed and timed introduction in Congress of a joint resolution appropriating out of any moneys in the National Treasury the sum of Fifteen Thousand Dollars ($15,000—no cents) to defray the expenses of those Senators who wish to "trail" the President on his speaking tour.

Of course, it is not so much the amount of the appropriation which Newton, of Missouri, proposes as the purpose to which it is to be put that constitutes the rare dome-value of the conception. That value would be as rare if the sum to be appropriated were $15,000,000, or 15 cents. It is the fact that with this money the Congress of the Nation is to pay the way for trailers to track and trounce the President of the Nation that wins for Newton, of Missouri, the dazzling domeship of his genus.

It is altogether a matter of secondary consideration why he fixed $15,000 as the amount needed. He may, in an anomalous streak of intelligence, have figured that it would be a waste of money to spend more than $15,000 on that particular pack of Senatorial trailers notwithstanding the material advances in the prices of dog biscuits. Or it may be that he figured that $15,000 would be ample, having such confidence in the ability of the Senatorial trailers that he expected them to run the Presidential quarry to cover before even so small an expense fund was exhausted. But be that as it may, it is hardly probable that the money will ever be used by the Senate pack. They have a keen appreciation of the futility of baying at the President already; they know that the trail would be a long one and that $15,000 would scarcely pay for more than a couple of day's supply of stomach bitters for the trailers.

From the New York Public.

Representative Newton of Missouri proposes to have Congress vote $15,000 to defray the expenses of the Senators who plan to follow the President, whose trip will be charged to the annual traveling fund of $25,000 voted by Congress. And why not? Who shall presume to say that a speech of any Senator is not equal to the speech of a President? If a President is to have $25,000 to travel about the country making speeches, holding receptions, and hobnobbing with local dignitaries, why should not similar provision be made for each Senator? Nay, why distinguish among members of Congress? Representatives merely seem cheaper than Senators because there are more of them; and since there is no one to say who is who, they should all be treated alike—as they were when private secretaries were provided for all members. If some members do not speak they will be so much to the good—as were those members who had no need for a secretary and appointed their wives to draw the salary. If each member is allowed $10,000 for speech-making tours, it would mean only $5,310,000. And what is $5,300,000 among Congressmen?



When I find a man who, in a public matter, will not state his side of his case, I know that his side is the losing side.

YOU GUESSED IT.

HER eyes resembled azure pools,
  Where sunbeams lurked and played
And chased each other 'round about
Like fairies in the glade.

From purest gold her hair was spun:
  It sat her like a crown,
But shadows fell upon it as
  On earth, when sun goes down.

Fair was her skin, though touched with pink,
  And soft as the breath of May,
And smooth, save in one rounded cheek
  A roguish dimple lay.

To adequately sing her praise,
  Mere words could not respond—
In other words, I mean to say:
  The lady was a blond.

WINNING THE WEST.

LET us not imagine that the West has been won. That is a long fight and a hard one. It had been five years since I had seen the West when I went out there last Summer, and after looking it over I concluded that one would have trouble making out which way the battle is going. It seems that we gain ground all the time; but progress is even more tedious than was Joffre's celebrated nibbling, which we are told broke the patience of France.

It must be that one who goes out to that front falls stubbornly and only retreats when they carry him off the field. I saw hundreds of ranches in the Northwest, where three successive dry years had the settlers pushed back to the Marne, and the line looked as if when it cracked it would go off into a puff of dust. Yet—such is the spirit with which we are winning the West—I saw a young woman who had homesteaded near the Judith Basin country in Montana and had just recently induced her father to give up his medical practice in Indiana and take his place on the firing line next on her right.

Why did she want him to do that—so she could be near him? I don't think so. I fancy she thought her father had never really lived. He was old in years, but had never discovered what fiber is in him. The daughter wanted him to come to grips with the West. She wanted him to get knocked down and pushed back until he got his dander up and sunk his teeth in the enemy to hold on for life.

Do you read the letters of the sagebrush farmer's wife in the Atlantic Monthly? That is the West—the unbeaten, hard-hitting, merciless West, which never says die, though die it must. Those letters in the current issue are terrible. The sagebrush farmer's wife lives in Idaho. It doesn't make much difference where it is. Except in a few garden spots the fight is the same, whether in one end of the great desert or the other—or north or south, or far in or far out.

You lay these last letters down asking why people will live in such a place. Ah! That is the same question one asks one's self traveling in the West. Why will one who has a good fertile farm in Illinois sell out and go West to fight the sagebrush, probably to die with no more than a handful of the desert's hair clutched in his stiffened hand? We do not know why it is. It seems to be due to the spirit of adventure. There, in analysis, is a war to which one may always go. The mettle in some of us requires to be proven. We must have resistance. One gets it out West. Blow for blow that fight goes on year in and year out, the battle surging to and fro, both sides enjoying it, and neither scoring any very great gains. One could laugh, seeing a little grizzled, blinking man standing before his unpainted shanty out in the short grass country, with no sign of a crop anywhere on his land this year, to recall how Homeric it is, what an indomitable will pervades that dried-up little body, and, as they say in the amusing idioms of sport, what a hog for punishment our hero is. It is not true, as some of our United States Senators allege, that our natures demand war and that man shall always shed the blood of his brother. There is always a claim one can take up in the Western United States, and scarcely a nation on earth but is sending her sons to that fight. That is all the world war we need; and judging by the way both sides seemed to be sticking it out last Summer, there is no danger of it ending suddenly because somebody's morale collapsed.

This is what the Chicago Post, a Republican paper, said editorially the day after Senators Johnson and Borah spoke there against the League of Nations:

> These senatorial extremists do their party no good. They do their nation no good. They offer absolutely nothing constructive. Borah made an elaborate and solemn pretense of telling what "he would do" beyond amending the treaty, but he stopped short when he had made his amendments and presented them to the allied Powers. He had nothing to offer as to reopening the peace conference and remaking the treaty.
> Why is it that they cannot be reasonable? Why cannot they make their sound criticisms, offer and put over their "interpretations" without following Knox into a "separate peace" with Germany; McCormick into withdrawal of our troops from Germany, and Borah and Johnson into insulting attacks on our allies?
>
> The whole treaty fight is going to end in a compromise, anyway. And for this small victory the Republican Senators will leave us an endless bequest of religious prejudice, race prejudice, Irish prejudice, Wall street prejudice and international hatreds of all kinds.
> It is a pretty small game. It is not worth winning in the way Johnson and Borah are trying to win it. The price is too high. That is why last night's meeting, with all its jovial fireworks, is depressing to any serious observer of American and world affairs.

Almost an invitation to the President to stop there and tell them about it.

NONCOMPETITIVE SERVICES.

From the Sprinfigeld (Mass.) Republican.

POLICEMEN are but one of the numerous groups of workers, some of them of high rank, whose services cannot be valued in the ordinary way because they are not strictly of an economic character. The same may be said of teachers. That sturdy individualist, Adam Smith, was for leaving education to take its chances—no free schools, no endowments, no subsidies, every teacher to earn what he could from the fees of pupils who esteemed his services highly enough to pay for them. There was of course an astringent kernel of truth in what he said which modern education cannot afford to overlook.

But Adam Smith lived in a day when Government was the affair of a select class; democracy had not yet faced the problem of educating the masses. It is no longer possible to restrict instruction to what people are willing to pay for at a price regulated strictly by the law of supply and demand. Yet that law, inadequate as it may be for some of the needs of society, does have the advantage of working automatically in response to changing conditions, and it must be confessed that society has not found as yet an efficient substitute by which to readjust wages which in general are regulated mainly by custom.

In a general way there is recognition, in times like these, that the old scale is inadeqaute. But unfortunately the need for revision always coincides with an intensified demand for retrenchment to offset a general rise. Workers who are not in a position to bargain strongly are at a disadvantage in such an economic scrimmage. Yet in general a resort to collective bargaining, in such cases, is a misfortune, because a solid basis for bargaining is lacking.

Schools, for instance, can be "run" in a fashion with cheap labor, and the tendency has been too much toward the factory ideal—standardized processes, a smart superintendent, and the underpaid "hands." The ideal toward which society must move to realize the full possibilities of education is just the opposite, and to attain it the public must itself be constantly educated to the need of finding and properly rewarding a higher grade of men and women. If the standards are upheld pay will have to correspond.

MR. CHURCHILL'S WAR.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

ON all sides Mr. Churchill's war against the Soviets is meeting with hard knocks. Yesterday Arthur Henderson won a by-election in which Russia was conspicuously an issue, and the trades union congress at Glasgow voted to demand withdrawal from Russia, providing means for further action by labor if the demand is refused. From the opposite side Winston Churchill's Russian strategy is scored by the distinguished military critic, Gen. Maurice, who in an article cabled to the New York Times shows not merely that the Archangel expedition was a failure but that it was made under false pretenses. American troops, it may be recalled, were sent there under the impression that they were to guard stores which the Germans might seize; the censorship long prevented divulgence of the fact that the stores had been carried off by the Russians before the allies occupied Archangel.

To the military experts who are exposing the heedless folly of the strategy identified with Winston Churchill's name are added the economists who are calling for rigid retrenchment if bankruptcy is to be avoided and who show the futility of saving at the spigot and wasting at the bung. As Gen. Maurice says: "Naval and military expenditure will not be reduced to a scale which conforms to Britain's means until the whole of her commitments have been reviewed systematically." Of these commitments by far the most serious is the effort to impose on the greatet nation in the world a government which that nation does not want. The shortest cut to the road which leads away from bankruptcy is making an end of Mr. Churchill's war and letting Russia govern itself without foreign dictation or foreign interference.

Wire- messages sent out by the enemy the battle also plainly indicate they had early information of lan. Within the army itself it ery difficult to keep the secret, e very concentration of heavy artillery and trench mortars, which took part in every attack, revealed our intentions.

In spite of long consideration, we had been unable to think of any other way. We clearly realized how cumbrous was the method of attack, and made all efforts to deceive the enemy as to our intentions; everything possible was done in this direction.

Postal prohibitions were useless; there were so many channels connecting us with him, and I could not stop leave, which was, after all, the only concession the army could make to the men. Leave had to be stopped for a considerable period on account of the railway transport conditions in February and March, and at that time many army commanders urgently desired it to be resumed.

While the commanders were doing their utmost to keep these secrets, the love of talking and boasting that is inborn in Germans betrayed to the world and to our enemies things of the greatest weight and significance.

We were attacked early on July 15. Our crossing of the Marne was a remarkable achievement, which succeeded, although the enemy were fully prepared for it.

The Seventh Army, between the Marne and the Ardre (southwest of Rheims) also penetrated the most obstinately defended positions. The Italian divisions stationed there suffered particularly.

About five kilometers south of the Marne the attacking troops came upon an enemy force so strong that it could only be overcome by bringing a large number of batteries over the river, and so the attack at this point came to a standstill. On the 16th, by hard fighting, we slowly gained ground up the Marne and towards the Ardre.

By noon of the 16th the G. H. Q. had given orders for the suspension of the offensive of the First and Third Armies, and for their organization for defense by withdrawing certain divisions for this purpose. A continuation of the offensive would have cost us too much. We had to content ourselves with the improvement in our position, brought about by regaining possession of the heights we had lost in the spring of 1917, and we had even secured a deep forward zone. The troops that had been withdrawn were at the disposal of the group of the German Crown Prince or of G. H. Q. as reserves. I considered it of the greatest importance that they should be available as soon as possible.

Once the difficult decision to suspend the offensive of the First and Third Armies had been taken, it was useless to attempt to advance further across the Marne, or to leave our troops on the southern bank.

It seemed out of the question to withdraw the troops immediately, as the few bridges were under incessant artillery fire; and were constantly bombed or machine-gunned by enemy planes. We had to make arrangements for crossing before the retreat could even begin. On the 17th the retreat was fixed for the night before the 20th and 21st. The troops on the Marne had lived through days of severe trial and behaved like heroes.

Still Hoped to Get Rheims.

G. H. Q. thought that only north of the Marne could the offensive be continued up the Ordre Valley, in order to surround Rheims till more closely, and possibly even to take it. By the 16th the Army Group of the German Crown Prince had received the necessary instructions. On the afternoon of the 17th I was in Rethel at First Army Headquarters to discuss the continuance of the attack on Rheims. I urged the necessity for speedy action, so that we might retain the initiative on this battlefield also.

From the report of the Chief of Staff I gathered that many days would be needed for the preparations to continue even this purely local attack. I was, therefore, obliged to resign myself, but I begged the German Crown Prince to build up reserves as quickly as possible, and pointed out the probable immediate necessity of strengthening the Eighteenth Army and the right wing of the Ninth.

The other fronts were, in my opinion, sound. For the moment C. H. Q. still clung to the idea of an attack in Flanders, under the Army Group of Crown Prince Rupprecht, although the hoped-for weakening of the enemy had not come about. The railway transport of artillery trench mortars and planes from the Rheims district had begun according to plan on the 16th.

Told of American Smash.

In the night of the 17th-18th I, myself, went to the headquarters of the Army Group of the Crown Prince Ruprecht, to re-inspect again the state of their preparations. The attack was intended as a continuation of the one that had been suspended at the end of April. It was to be made by the Fourth and Sixth Armies, north of the Lys, its objective being the possession of the commanding heights between Poperinghe and Balleul, as well as to the high ground round Hazebrouck.

During the discussion with the Army Group of Crown Prince Ruprecht on the morning of the 18th, I received the first news that, by means of an unexpected tank offensive, the French had pierced the line southwest of Soissons.

At the same time the army group of the German Crown Prince announced that it had sent to the battlefield, partly by motor transport, those divisions, in the first instance the Twentieth Infantry Division, which had been intended for the continuation of the offensive up the Ardre. (On the east front of the Marne pocket.)

I immediately ordered the Fifth Infantry Division to proceed by rail, via Laon, to the district just northeast of Soissons, where the tunnel was already complete. This division, which had been held at the disposal of G. H. Q., was quartered northeast of St. Quentin and all arrangements had been made for its rapid movement by rail to any point.

Great Nervous Tension.

I concluded the conference at the army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht for the last time on that day, and our relations then, as ever, were cordial.

I reached Avesnes at 2 p. m. and was met at the station by the Field Marshal. We immediately retired to the office. The position of the left wing of the Ninth Army and the right of the Seventh Army had become serious.

Kaiser's Weak Character Kept Subordinates in Hot Water Constantly, Writes Von Tirpitz

His Habit of Interfering in Things He Knew Nothing About and Censuring Faithful Servants—Several of Them Without Reason—Broke the Moral Backbones of All but the Very Strong Around Him.

By ALFRED VON TIRPITZ,
Grand Admiral of the German Navy.

FOURTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

IN any consideration of life under the Kaiser in imperial Germany, by one of his most intimate subordinates, such as I was for many years, there is no escaping the remarkable part played in the affairs of the German empire by its ruler's lack of character. The old Emperor, William I, had bequeathed to his imperial grandson a wealth of love, almost immeasurable, reverence, and constitutional power. Naturally it follows that the Kaiser was bound to be the deciding personality on whom depended the attempt Germany was forced to make to win a secure position of her own by the side of Anglo-Saxondom. This was true of William both intellectually and materially.

Anglo-Saxondom at the outset of his reign was reaching out and embracing the whole world like an octopus. The necessity for Germany's supreme effort to gain a place of equal power had been realized by the Kaiser before he ascended the throne. This was manifest even at the time of the sickness of his ill-fated father, as I could plainly see when we were crossing to England in June, 1887, to attend the jubilee festivities of Queen Victoria, the Kaiser's grandmother. (The Kaiser's mother was the Princess Royal, daughter of Queen Victoria.)

Even in those days, when we were very close to England, both materially and socially, William's thoughts embraced all of the vital conditions of Germany's existence connected with sea power. But, while the manner in which the German empire did business—to use a homely expression—had been characterized (under our unforgettable old Emperor, William I) by clearness and resolution, that of his grandson was distinguished more by impulse. There were many reasons for this, of which the world, now torn by the wastage of war, may have forgotten or never has known.

To one like myself, who had watched these traits of the Kaiser since the days of his youth, the danger was apparent at all times that irresponsible influences around William would release within him impulses which would be either impossible to carry out or would not be in harmony with the whole course of action of Germany, if the empire was to realize the full fruits of German kultur and gain her place in the sun. The Kaiser had swift comprehension, supreme self-consciousness, and a great imagination. This last was easily distracted, and this trait, as I shall show in these memoirs, played a fatal part in the destinies of Germany.

The Psychology of the Kaiser

For a man in such a high position as his, I early realized that it would always be a difficult task in life to separate a mere momentary success from a permanent triumph. The merely decorative, to such a nature as the Kaisers, is always treacherously insinuating itself—but never quite distinctively, into the essentials.

Now a sense for cold, hard facts was the principal condition for the success of Germany's great effort to gain her place in the world, and as the Kaiser had selected me as his assistant in this task, it became my personal duty in the imperial court to see to it that the German ship of state was kept toward its goal, on the constant course which we were steering. This was quite in keeping with my nature. It perhaps will be understood, however, that this duty was not always easy to fulfill under the circumstances.

The Kaiser's character was the opposite of mine. In the course of his reign I had seen, and the world has known, that many of his most intimate advisers had their moral backbones broken on the rack of his personality and his whims. But I was able to save myself from that! The Kaiser undoubtedly believed that he would not be able to succeed without my organizing experience, but I was at times an awkward subordinate, and as such, I may truly say I have gone through all the stages of his favor and his disfavor. An acquaintance once said to me that in such situations as mine "the state of slight disfavor" was most desirable.

Of course I had to give the Kaiser his due. I always endeavored to satisfy those wishes of my monarch that were capable of fulfillment, even those that were merely capricious—so long, that is to say, as I could be financially responsible for them. I was less successful, however, in damning back the flood of spectacular celebrations, speeches, and naval festivities like the regatta week at Kiel, and the theatrical christening of warships, because the Kaiser always said that they were useful pieces of propaganda for the German public. In my mind, however, was a more important consideration. I was deeply peturbed on account of the effect they were bound to have in foreign countries.

Ruler's Whims Stirred His Navy.

In all the essential points regarding the creation of the German High Seas fleet, I had to stand firm. I have not always been able to say everything I thought during these constructive days, for various reasons which need not be revived here, but I only poured out pure wine for the Kaiser. He was at all times making suggestions for the naval construction program. Some of these were as fanciful as his moods when he made them. These, of course, were forgotten as soon as he could forget them.

But others were more serious, for William kept a sharp eye on naval progress all over the world, and he had a positive genius for facts and figures of the navies of the other Powers—even to the technical details of types of new warships. This kept us in hot water at times.

If he heard, or read, or saw anything regarding naval progress by another Power, he straightway would address himself toward creating in his not too practical mind, a German substitute or means of surmounting it. On such occasions, his skill with his pen, and his knowledge of the main points of naval construction, made unpleasant times at Naval Headquarters. He constantly made suggestions regarding our fortifications in Heligoland, and our costal forts engrossed him exceedingly. With buildings, too, he addressed his energies, but he was never so busy as when he set out to design our warships themselves.

The problems of how they would fit into the whole fleet, and the matter of the financial budget, then disappeared into the background. Knowing the foreign navies so well, and viewing them with eyes of a German, he was inclined to see their advantages. Anybody who would come to him with some tale of distrust of the quality of our own materials always found him eager to lend a willing ear. He drew sketches of ships with some talent and more zeal, had them engraved and duplicated, and distributed them broadcast in German official circles, as is well known, even to those who were members of the Reichstag during his reign. The Reichstag, of course, received these sketches with mixed feelings.

Scuttling the "Homunculus."

But without the Kaiser, Germany's estrangement from the sea and the naval interests and tasks bound up with it would never have been overcome. That is his historic merit. Also, his suggestions were of use in other ways. His drawbacks, in the eyes of foreign countries, were the great stress he laid upon our naval aims and successes; while at home, in domestic afairs, there was the ever-recurring clash between his personal impulses and the real tasks of the authorities of the army and navy. In addition to its excess of normal work during this time, our Admiralty very often had to elaborate preliminary construction programs from the Kaiser's own plans, which often suffered from internal contradictions.

For example, in the years immediately preceding the war, the Kaiser knew the concern which existed in naval quarters throughout the world over the difficulty of torpedo boats and destroyers approaching the enemy in battle by day. The improvements of gunnery at sea and the invention of the great-ranged, modern naval rifles of high caliber, made it so. So the Kaiser immediately became enthusiastic about an ideal ship, which he designed himself—heavily armored, swift and reinforced with many torpedo tubes, which would relieve the torpedo boats of their task.

Apart from the fact that speed and heavy armor compete against each other in naval construction of big ships, his torpedo armament, which was to be put below the water line, would have taken up the greater part of the engine and boiler space. However, at the Admiralty we set to work to comply with the command we had received. Every ship in course of designing or construction had to have a designating name and, in view of the impossibility of coming to any useful results the Admiralty secretly gave this project the name of "Homunculus."

Then I bided my time until I had an opportunity of presenting and explaining the draft of the plans, when the Kaiser immediately abandoned his idea and accepted my explanation. As my reward I received permission to shoot a stag in the imperial hunting preserves. Thus I was able to telegraph this clearing of the atmosphere to my chief of the central department at the Admiralty, who was anxiously awaiting in Berlin, in these words: "Stag and Homunculus both dead."

It became the custom that I should go to Rominten (the Kaiser's favorite hunting grounds near Russian frontier) every year during the last days of September to make my report. The air of the forest and the comparative quiet suited the Kaiser well. He was calmer and more collected there than it was possible for him to be in the bustle of Berlin or on his numerous journeys. In Rominten I always found the Kaiser ready to hear me, and weigh my reasons for whatever I had to advocate.

Outbreaks Tried His Aids.

There were none of his sudden outbreaks of nervous excitement such as frequently occurred elsewhere, announcing themselves by a certain wild restlessness in his eyes. On the appearance of such symptoms I used to put all important decisions silently under a table. This was, however, not always practical with questions which required haste. I finally came to the conclusion that the Kaiser's constitution was not equal to the pressure of his responsibility.

At such times he was a task to his subordinates, his marginal notes on their reports and recommendations being of the most scathing character, but with the passage of these mad moods he would be all urbanity once more. He was very much astonished, therefore, when after I had been pilloried by one of these notes, I handed to him my resignation. He explained that he used to tell his other Ministers things without them taking his remarks to heart or even literally. In order to appraise the value or worthlessness of these and similar expressions it was necessary to have known the Kaiser very well. He himself dismissed the matter of my resignation by exclaiming: "You must not bind me to my marginal notes!"

That he was not so bound is proved by the archives of the Wilhelmstrasse. If he failed to conquer himself, his Ministers did the task for him. But who shall say that the Kaiser, possibly better than anyone else, did not realize his own weaknesses, and that he strove not aways successfully, to master them as well as he was able?

Synopsis of Fifteenth Installment—Von Tirpitz in his next installment takes up the part the Kaiser's marginal notes of criticism and reproach played in Germany's ruin. He tells how the cunning statesmen surrounding William secretly made these notes indelible with chemicals, so that they would be a constant drawback to his personal policy. The Admiral also pays a tribute to the Empress, showing how she personally intervened and prevented the Kaiser from dismissing Gen. von Hindenburg after the collapse of the Eastern campaign early in 1915.

Mrs. Solomon Says--

(Being the Confessions of the Seven-Hundredth Wife).

By HELEN ROWLAND.

While a Man Hunteth Vainly for the Key to Wisdom, a Woman Picketh the Lock With an Hairpin, and Readeth the Signs Upon the Wall.

BEHOLD, my Daughter, how "primitive" are the ways of a woman!

But, all the ways of a man are "enlightened," in his own eyes.

Lo, a woman, first decideth what are her political convictions—and then discovereth to what party she belongeth.

But a man, first, concludeth to which party he belongeth—and then discovereth his political convictions.

A woman consumeth two hours in preparing to retire at night—and 20 minutes in arraying herself for breakfast in the morning.

But a man spendeth two minutes in tumbling into bed at night—and half an hour in hunting for his shoes in the morning.

A woman frivoleth away her time in making "shopping lists," before she starteth for the market places.

But a man "keepeth it all in his head"—and then, RETURNETH unto the shop for what he hath forgotten.

A woman beginneth by cajoling and smiling, and resorteth to bullying, only when all wheedling faileth.

But a man beginneth by storming and blustering—and endeth by apologizing and letting his wife have her own way.

A woman anointeth her hair with tonics to keep it thick and luxurious. But a man waiteth until he hath LOST all his top hair, and then proceedeth to coax it back again, with tonics and prayers and "magic cures."

A woman consumeth half the evening in dressing for a party—and stayeth "put" for the other half thereof. But a man batheth and shaveth and dresseth in half an hour—and then spendeth the rest of the night in trying to keep his shirt bosom from bulging.

A woman counteth all comely women her rivals, until they have proved themselves innocent. But a man counteth no man his rival until proved guilty, since, in his childlike simplicity, he cannot conceive of a woman finding any other man more attractive than himself.

A woman wasteth three days in shopping for a garment which she will peradventure wear but three times. But a man spendeth three minutes in selecting an orevcoat, which he shall, peradventure, wear for three seasons.

A woman spendeth her youth in preparing for marriage—and taketh it as a matter of course. But a man spendeth his youth in dodging marriage, and then is utterly astonished when it happeneth to him.

A woman starteth out in search of her ideal—and endeth by marrying whatsoever the Fates deal out to her. But a man starteth out by marrying some "innocent bystander"—and then spendeth the rest of his life in searching for his Ideal.

A woman beginneth by assuming that all men are devils, and falleth down upon her knees in gratitude and rejoicing when she discovereth one man that is human.

But a man beginneth by believing that all women are angels and endeth by assuming that they are all devils—because one of them chanced to prove human!

A woman hath no particular theories on life, but manageth to work it out according to her intuition.

But a man mappeth out his life, as the Kaiser mapped out Mittel Europa—and then permitteth some woman to CHANGE the Map.

Verily, verily, all the ways of a man are logical.

But a woman is merely biological!

And while a man hunteth vainly for the KEY to wisdom, she picketh the lock with a hatpin and readeth the signs upon the wall!

The Business of Home Making

When Old Homes Are Made Into New.

By MRS. CHRISTINE FREDERICK.
Efficiency Expert.

TODAY the shortage of homes is so great, that many a brownstone mansion formerly occupied by only one family is being remodeled into flats for occupancy by several. In such a case, many are the makeshifts to which the poor old house must submit.

One of the most common changes is to throw what was formerly the immense parlor and second parlor (just think of a second parlor in that wasteful age!) and closets into a complete apartment. The modern young homemaker objects at once to the unusually high ceilings which make her present furniture seem dwarfed and lost. She has not, and cannot buy the four-poster and wardrobe which originally went with such spaciousness. And so, she quite frequently refuses to move into such a dwelling, preferring low ceilings and shoebox rooms.

But this is a mistake, for by the right wall treatment such rooms do not make the present-day furniture seem small. It is an easy matter to break the line of such walls by a molding or platerail run horizontally across, at a height of about eight or nine feet from the floor. A second plan is to use a great number of small pictures on the walls, thus breaking up the lines. The third idea is to make the upper part of the wall, above the molding, of a darker shade than the lower portion. This will 'bring down" the ceiling, and lessen its height.

That last means of shortening such high walls is to avoid any straight or horizontal treatment of the space—that is, not to have long curtains, extending clear up to the tops of the windows, but to arrange shorter ones, and of figured materials, which will make the length of the windows seem less. In other words, since the walls are high, and we wish to bring them down, we must use every means to place pictures, ornaments and hangings so that their horizontal effect is accentuated. This will very greatly counteract the effect of the too great vertical length of the walls themselves.

For instance, a double bookcase, placed across between two windows, is one successful illusion to lessen height. To arrange a small mirror, with balanced pictures on either side, will also give width to the wall space. The furniture itself may be so arranged as to give the effect of curves and cross lines in the room, rather than placed formally and straight against walls.

If the old-fashioned large central light is still retained, as it often is, this "sky-high" effect which few today like, may be remedied by connecting cords leading to small table lamps at various parts of the room. Indeed, under no circumstances must such a high chandelier enter into modern lighting. It is a poor type of light to read by, and is too formal for our present-day needs and tastes. Even if retained as a central ornament, the real lighting may be supplied in separate small lighting units as suggested.

One unhappy bride who was forced to seek refuge from the rent profiteer in such a remodeled house was at first inconsolable because "how queer and small my furniture will look; those walls will just kill it, I know." But she persuaded the landlord to let her haev a molding put up, as I suggest, and carried out the horizontal idea in her furnishings and treatment, and now her flat 'is too lovely for anything," and so very, very roomy after all.

FALL AND WINTER APPLES ARE GOOD FOR CANNING

ONLY smooth, sound, medium-sized cooking apples should be used for canning. The late fall and winter varieties, which are usually somewhat acid, retain their flavor better than the sweet varieties. Remove the skin and core, cut into convenient slices, and drop into slightly salted water to keep from discoloration. Apples shrink more in canning than most fruits, and for this reason should be scalded 1½ minutes in hot boiling water. Remove from the scalding water and dip for an instant in cold water.

Pack closely in hot jars which have been boiled 15 minutes. Fill jars to overflowing with hot syrup and put on rubbers and tops which have been boiled. With screw-top jars, make the cover about half-tight. With glass-top jars, put one wire bale in position and leave the other one up. Place jars on a false bottom of wood in the bottom of utensil used for processing them. There should be sufficient water in this utensil to cover the jars, unless a tight-fitting cover which will keep in the steam is used. With this, water to the shoulder of the cans is sufficient.

Boil, starting to count time after the water boils, 12 minutes. Remove at the close of the processing time from the canner, and tighten covers. Invert to cool and test for leaks. Store in a cool, dry place.

To can apple sauce, core and steam the apples until soft. Rub through a colander, return to the fire and heat thoroughly, and pack hot in the jars. Seal at once and process 10 minutes in a hot-water bath.

For pies or salads, apples may be canned whole, quartered or sliced ready for pie filling.

Here Is Latest St. Louis Writer to "Arrive"

Shirley Seifert, Once She Got Started, Made Rapid Headway in the Big Magazines.

Writes About People of Everyday Life, Who Are Familiar to the Everyday Reader.

THE latest St. Louis writer to "arrive" in a group of fiction authors whose stories are published in the Saturday Evening Post is Miss Shirley L. Seifert of 5774 De Giverville avenue, who was educated at Central High School and Washington University.

It didn't take Miss Seifert long to "arrive" after she got started. The first story she ever sold to a magazine was printed in the American of July, and her story, "Fetters of Habit," was in the Aug. 30 issue of the Saturday Evening Post. Since her first success, she has sold five stories to leading periodicals, including the Delineator and the Metropolitan Magazine.

"Fetters of Habit" might have happened anywhere, but the scenes actually are St. Louis scenes. It is a story of a tired grocery clerk who suddenly was precipitated into a life of leisure when his wife announced that she had been keeping a secret savings account for 23 years, and had enough to retire on.

"John Borch," the clerk, who had been grumbling bitterly at his lot, couldn't adjust himself to his new affluence, and secretly returned to his old job until his wife discovered what he was up to, and bought him a store of his own.

Miss Seifert told a Post-Dispatch reporter where she got the idea. When riding on a Kirkwood car last summer, she saw a number of day laborers leaving their work at a brick plant. It caused her to wonder, she said, what one of these men would do if he suddenly came into possession of riches. Soon afterward she saw in a West End grocery, an old clerk who supplied the type for "John Borch." Her description of a Saturday night in a grocery store was actually taken from a large West End store.

"Those are the people that I intend to write about," she said. "My characters are people that you see every day. It may be a clerk in a downtown railroad office, or it may be a dentist's assistant in the West End. I believe that the true purpose of a short story should be simply to illustrate some character or some condition with which everybody is familiar."

Miss Seifert has arranged to write a series of stories based on life in St. Louis, which will be published in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine this fall.

MISS SHIRLEY SEIFERT.

As is known, Miss Fanny Hurst, a St. Louis woman, has for several years been writing short stories, mostly of the "working girl" type, for leading periodicals, and recently Ralph Mooney, a St. Louis newspaper reporter, wrote a story based on the career of the notorious Lewis boys, which was printed in the Saturday Evening Post.

"There are three things I never tell—my age, my weight and the size of my shoes," said Miss Seifert, in response to a question. "I was graduated from Washington University in 1909, and that's as close as I care to come to my age. And I want to say that I was the youngest member in my class, too." Her father is Richard Seifert, chief engineer for the Polar Wave Co.

Miss Seifert has light hair, blue eyes, is of medium height and sturdy physique, and an exceedingly agreeable manner. When interviewed, she was preparing for a night game of tennis on the Forest Park courts.

"I am a most unusually ordinary person, as you see," she said. "That's why I have had success in writing about ordinary people. I know just how we feel.

"I took a course in the school of journalism at the University of Wisconsin two years ago, and thought I would be a newspaper woman, but I decided it was too hard. I believe I can make a living easier this way, and perhaps it is better suited to my style of writing."

Miss Seifert has a rigid routine. She goes to her desk, in her home, promptly at 9 a. m., takes half an hour for lunch, and works until 3 p. m. She works five days a week, and never breaks her schedule, she said.

Like most authors, Miss Seifert has opinions concerning the "prevailing unrest," but they are quite simple. She said:

"There is always this sort of thing after a great war. There is more of it this time, because this was a greater war." However, she added that she thought there was another factor, namely: education.

"The servant girl question illustrates it," she said. "It is hard to get anybody now who is willing to be called a servant. We all want to be ladies and gentlemen. However, unlike some very respectable people, I don't think the answer is to stop educating people. There has got to be some arrangement whereby we will all wait upon ourselves, and still be ladies and gentlemen."

And in this connection she remarked that she believes the editors of publications are stressing too much the commercial side of life, and eliminating the romance of it.

But, getting back to her writing, she said she always does it on a scratch pad with a fountain pen. When it is all finished, she writes the completed draft on the typewriter.

"Plots—I have a head full of them," she said. "They are secondary. There are plots all around us. I get mine out of my diary and my memory. But there must be a main idea back of writing a story. I think some writers fail because they try to string a lot of incidents together when they have nothing to string them on. A writer should have something to say."

As the reporter was leaving she said: "Now keep in mind the fact that I am just a beginner myself. Don't have me posing as an authority, because I'm not—I'm a student."

The first story she sold was accepted by the tenth magazine to which it was sent, and 20 of her stories had been rejected before one was accepted, she said. On the other hand, her Saturday Evening Post story was accepted on its first trip.

"It's pretty much a matter of perseverance and postage," she said.

NOVELTIES IN DRESS ATTRACT THE NEW YORK WOMAN.

By JANE WYNNE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.

DURING this midseason, when the proper selection of clothes is such a burden, the smart women of New York are turning their attention toward novelties.

The weather is more independable than ever and when a fair day is apt to develop most any kind of weather from a thunder storm to a near-blizzard it is indeed a task to select the proper attire for the day, particularly if one is motoring in early in the morning from some resort on Long Island to attend perhaps two or three informal affairs that are scheduled.

There have been some very long faces lately when the elements played such a trick and caught some society woman, who has a reputation for wearing just the right thing at the right time, in a dainty summer frock when the cold winds began to blow, or, if she expected it to be a truly fall day and donned some heavy cloth gown and furs found at about tea time that it was too boiling hot for words.

But the smart New Yorker will not be caught in such a predicament often and now she is playing safe by wearing gowns of satin or georgette and turning her thoughts to novelties which can brighten any costume.

Veils, stockings and furs are the articles that are for the moment coming in for the greatest amount of attention with the New York society women. The variety of these accessories is apparently inexhaustible and both imported and domestic ideas are brought into service.

THE windy days have brought forth most attractive veils. They are worn in all colors and with their fancy figures set off a somber costume to perfection. Light stockings with dark gowns also have great popularity, particularly among those who are returning from abroad. Stockings are such an important item when the short, French gowns are worn that they are now chosen with most unusual care. Tones of gray, and particularly blue gray, are being shown the preference with most all shades of gowns and tan stockings are also seen in great numbers with frocks of brown and tan tones.

With so many titled visitors here, and most of them famous beauties and recognized dictators of fashion, there is ample opportunity for those who are a bit tired of the usual thing to get new ideas. The Duchess of Southerland, the Duchess of Roxburghe and the Baroness de Cartier were all stopping at the Ritz-Carlton last week and their gowns were carefully studied by the luncheon and dinner guests.

Since her recent trip to Europe, where she was married to the Belgian Minister, the Baroness de Cartier has adopted the French silhouette, a complete departure for her, for hertofore she selected only the trim gowns of straight lines. At luncheon the other day she appeared in a gown of dark blue and white figured georgette draped over a short satin skirt. There was a great deal of fullness over the hips and the waistline was high. The bodice was cut much lower at the throat than the usual gown seen here, and with this costume she wore blue gray hose and black low shoes with the unmistakable French strap.

EVERYONE who saw the Duchess of Sutherland was struck by her beauty, and everyone is eagerly awaiting her return from the West, for she is sure to be entertained a great deal. So far she has favored somber costumes and one evening at the Ritz she was particularly striking in a simple black evening gown with a single string of pearls.

AUTUMN weddings are occurring in great numbers now, and many novelties for the bridal gown are being introduced. Margaret Clinton of Tuxedo and New York, a bride of Wednesday, was most attractive with her hair done in 1830 fashion and her gown was also fashioned after the gowns of that period. Mrs. Gulian Lansing (Miss Elizabeth Pilling) of Glen Cove, L. I. as another Wednesday bride wore a gown of white chiffon over ivory satin with a court train of chiffon and satin. For an ornament she wore a long string of Egyptian carnelians, dating from about 2,000 B. C., the gift of the bridegroom.

Conspicuous among the coteries taking tea at Delmonico's the other day was a party of society folk who had forsaken Tuxedo for a week to "hike" over the Long Trail in Vermont. They had just arrived in New York by automobile and were wildly enthusiastic over Vermont's gold and red autumn. They visited the Webb's place at Shelburne, which is remarkably interesting, even among beautiful country estates.

Y. W. C. A. LODGES 1200 WAR BRIDES

OF the Y. W. C. A. Hostess Houses still in operation three are devoted to caring for the brides which American soldiers and sailors are bringing home with them from England, France, Belgium, Italy and from Luxembourg.

One of these is at Newport News, Va., the other two being in New York City. Twelve hundred women, many of them with children, have been accommodated at one of the New York City Hostess Houses.

The women sail on United States transports from Brest, France; Genoa or Naples, Italy; or Liverpool, England. At all of the ports the Y. W. C. A. maintains barracks or Hostess Houses where the women stay while awaiting their transport, and where they are instructed in the geography, customs and social customs of their new country. Instruction is given in practically every subject from American cooking and child hygiene to millinery.

On arriving in this country the brides are taken to Y. W. C. A. Hostess Houses to remain until their husbands are demobilized or can come or send for them.

Not the least of the Hostess House equipment in each case is the nursery where new little Americans are taken care of as well as their French or English born half brothers and sisters.

Removing Ashes by Suction Saves Labor and Dust

ASHES are now being removed from certain large buildings in New York City by a sort of magnified vacuum-cleaner system, with entire success and relief from dust, says the Popular Mechanics Magazine in an illustrated article. Before the boiler plant in each building is a concrete pit, three feet in width and depth, from which a pipe extends to the street level and terminates beneath the sidewalk. A truck carrying the apparatus connects its suction pipe with this terminal, and a powerful blower quickly extracts the ashes, which enter a bin and are subsequently dumped into another truck to be carted away.

The Sandman Story for Tonight.

By MRS. F. A. WALKER.

Bobbie Rabbit's Escape.

BOBBIE RABBIT had been told he must not go out of the house while his father and mother went up to the farm.

There was very little to eat in the house this cold weather and that was the reason Father and Mother Rabbit were to take such a big risk and run up to the farm where Mr. Dog lived.

They had not been gone very long when Bobbie Rabbit went to the door of his house and looked out. He could see the pond covered with smooth ice not far away and Bobbie thought it would be good fun to run across the pond to the tree on the other side where Timmy Squirrel lived.

So he closed the door and ran down to the pond and across he went to visit Timmy, who was very glad to see him, and they chatted longer than Bobbie Rabbit had intended to stay.

He was halfway across the pond on his way home when he heard Mr. Dog bark and the next thing he knew down came Mr. Dog from the bank and ran on the pond right after Bobbit Rabbit.

Bobbie ran and after him Mr. Dog, slipping and sliding, but still he was gaining on poor Bobbie Rabbit, and what would have happened if the hole had not been there, Bobbie Rabbit never could tell.

But a hole was there, right in the ice, and Bobbie did not see it and in he went, down into the cold, icy water.

Mr. Dog had been sure he would have Bobbie Rabbit the next jump he took, and he was very much surprised when Bobbie went out of sight.

Mr. Dog looked at the hole; then he turned around, for he thought Bobbit Rabbit must have run the other way, and as he turned he dropped his tail right over the hole in the ice. And at that very second up came Bobbie out of the cold water.

He grabbed at the first thing he saw, and that was the end of Mr. Dog's tail.

Mr. Dog jumped and ran when he felt the cold grip and out came Bobbie Rabbit from the water and away he ran for home like a streak of lightning.

His father and mother were at home when he opened the door, but instead of getting a scolding and perhaps worse; as he expected he would, Bobbie Rabbit was surprised enough when his mother put her arms about him and said: "Oh! You brave, brave boy! You saved our lives, for Mr. Dog had both of us cornered in a hole up the hill and we never expected to get out alive."

"Yes," said Father Rabbit, "you are a brave son, and we are proud of you; for when Mr. Dog saw you right before him on the pond he was so sure of getting you he left us and ran after you."

Bobbie Rabbit was so surprised to find himself a hero that he quite forgot the cold bath and the fright he had, but he did not wish to chance meeting Mr. Dog on the pond again even to become a hero.

The Curious Quest

By E. Phillips Oppenheim.

CHAPTER I.

MR. ERNEST BLISS descended from the 80-horsepower motor car, which had been the pride of a recent exhibition and languidly rang the bell of a large house in Harley street, which was the professional residence of Sir James Aldroyd, M. D. He was admitted almost at once by a solemn-visaged butler, and was escorted into the waiting room in which three other people were already seated. He turned to the servant with a frown.

"I wrote to Sir James for an appointment at 11 o'clock," he said. "My name is Bliss—Mr. Ernest Bliss. Please let Sir James know I am here."

"I am sorry, sir, but Sir James sees his patients strictly in the order of their arrival," the man replied regretfully. "I don't think that he will be very long this morning."

"Do you mean that I have to wait my turn?"

"I am afraid there is no other way of seeing Sir James," the servant confessed.

Bliss seated himself disconsolately in an easy chair and resigned himself to wait with an ill grace which he took no particular pains to conceal. He was a very spoilt young man, and he was inclined to resent this treatment from a physician whom he was proposing to honor by his patronage. Each time the butler entered the room he half rose, expecting to hear his name called—and each time he was disappointed. It was not until his turn arrived that he was shown into the presence of the phyhician.

Sir James Aldroyd was seated before the writing table, making some notes in a diary concerning the patient who had just left him. Bliss crossed the room and, without waiting for an invitation, sank into the chair which he rightly conceived to be the resting place of the doctor's patients.

"My name is Bliss," he began. "I wrote you"——

"Wait just a moment, please," the physician interrupted brusquely.

Bliss stared at him with his mouth still open. He was not in the habit of giving away to his emotions, but he was beginning to be conscious of a distinct sense of annoyance. He made no protest, however; the physician's personality was, in its way, overpowering. He sat still and waited. Presently Sir James finished writing in his diary and drew an open letter towards him. He glanced it through without any marked indication of interest. His new patient's symptoms apparently failed to move him.

"Mr. Ernest Bliss?" he remarked, swinging round on his chair and taking up a stethoscope. "You wish me to examine you? Very well. Stand up and take off your coat waistcoat, please."

Bliss obeyed at once and subm himself to the usual routine. minutes later, he sank back into chair with ruffled hair and a gen sense of having been subjected many personal ignominies. He sl ly buttoned up his waistcoat watched the physician's face.

"What made you come to m the latter asked.

"Can't say exactly," was the less reply. "Felt out of sorts thought I had better see some I heard Dicky Senn talking ab you one day."

"Are you alluding to Mr. Rich Senn of the Shaftesbury Theater?"

"Chap who does the ragtime da in the second act," the young m assented. "He was cracking you all over the shop. Said you were only doctor in England who c bined a certain amount of skill in profession with a reasonable le of common sense. Not trying to ter you up, you know, but these Dicky's own words, and Dicky kn things."

Sir James Aldroyd laid dow stethoscope and, leaning back in chair, looked steadfastly at his itor. His hard, clean-cut face, its massive forehead and stren lips, was not in any way an exp sive one, but it was obvious tha was regarding his new patient a certain amount of disfavor. eyes were cold and critical, his distant.

"Let me see, what did you your name was?" he asked.

"Ernest Bliss."

"How old are you?"

"Twenty-five."

"What is your profession?"

"Profession? I haven't one," young man replied.

"Your occupation, then," the sician continued impatiently. do something, I suppose?"

Bliss shook his head and gla toward his questioner, as the doubtful concerning the effect of next words.

"No necessity," he replied. father was Bliss, the ship owner. left me three-quarters of a mill Since then my uncle has left me b part of another million."

Sir James played with his p for a moment and looked dow the table. As a matter of self cipline, he was anxious to ke certain expression from his fac

"Stand up and take off your coat waistcoat, please."

Bliss obeyed at once and submit himself to the usual routine. minutes later, he sank back into chair with ruffled hair and a gene sense of having been subjected many personal ignominies. He slo ly buttoned up his waistcoat watched the physician's face.

"What made you come to m the latter asked.

"Can't say exactly," was the l less reply. "Felt out of sorts thought I had better see some I heard Dicky Senn talking ab you one day."

"Are you alluding to Mr. Rich Senn of the Shaftesbury Theater?"

"Chap who does the ragtime da in the second act," the young m assented. "He was cracking you all over the shop. Said you were only doctor in England who co bined a certain amount of skill in profession with a reasonable lea of common sense. Not trying to b ter you up, you know, but these w Dicky's own words, and Dicky kn things."

Sir James Aldroyd laid down stethoscope and, leaning back in chair, looked steadfastly at his itor. His hard, clean-cut face, its massive forehead and stren lips, was not in any way an exp sive one, but it was obvious that was regarding his new patient a certain amount of disfavor. eyes were cold and critical, his distant.

"Let me see, what did you your name was?" he asked.

"Ernest Bliss."

"How old are you?"

"Twenty-five."

"What is your profession?"

"Profession? I haven't one," young man replied.

"Your occupation, then," the sician continued impatiently. do something, I suppose?"

Bliss shook his head and glan toward his questioner, as tho doubtful concerning the effect of next words.

"No necessity," he replied. father was Bliss, the ship owner. left me three-quarters of a mill Since then my uncle has left me b part of another million."

Sir James played with his pe for a moment and looked down the table. As a matter of self- cipline, he was anxious to kee certain expression from his face.

The Local Style in Baseball Is a Rain Check, With an Invisible Long Green Stripe

Cincinnati Gets First Two Games of World Series

Next THREE Will Be Played in Victorious American League Club's Home.

SERIES TO OPEN OCT. 1

Ninth Contest, if One Is Needed, Will Go to City Winning the Toss.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 22.—Cincinnati won the toss for the opening game of the world's series, at the meeting of the National Baseball Commission here, today.

The first two games will be played in Cincinnati, the next three in the American League city winning the pennant of that league, then two in Cincinnati, if necessary, followed by one in the American League city. The place for the ninth game, if necesary, is to be decided by lot.

The first game is scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 1.

The umpires, who will judge the plays in the world series games, are:

American League: R. F. Nallin and William J. Evans.

National League: Charles Rigler and Emmett Quigley.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 22.—Louis Comiskey, son of Charles Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox, tossed the coin for the choice of the opening game.

The business representatives selected by the commission were Leslie F. Constans of Pittsburg, who will represent the National League, and William Haridge of Chicago, who will represent the American League.

WHITE SOX STILL NEED ONE VICTORY TO CLINCH AMERICAN LEAGUE FLAG

The Chicago White Sox, leaders in the American League pennant race, need one victory in their remaining five games to clinch the pennant. This would give them the flag, even though Cleveland wins its remaining four. The Indians are at present on a winning streak, having captured their last 10.

If Chicago wins one and Cleveland captures all its battles, the standings will be as follows:

	W.	L.
Chicago	88	52
Cleveland	87	52

The White Sox schedule for the final week is as follows: Sept. 24, 25, Browns; Sept. 26, 27, 28, Detroit. Cleveland's contests follow: Sept. 24, 25, at Detroit; Sept. 27, 28, Browns.

SEYMOUR, FORMER MAJOR LEAGUE PLAYER, IS DEAD

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—James Bentley Seymour, known as "Cy" Seymour when a major league outfielder, died at his home here Saturday night, it was learned yesterday. Seymour, who was 42 years old, and had played semiprofessional baseball in recent years, had been ill for some time.

While with the Cincinnati Nationals, Seymour led the league in batting in 1905 with .377 and when repurchased by the New York Nationals where he started his major league career, the purchase price, $12,000, was regarded as the largest baseball cash deal up to that time.

INDIANS TOOK SEVEN STRAIGHT LAST WEEK

JOHNSTON WINNER OVER BROOKES IN EXHIBITION

BERKELEY, Cal., Sept. 22.—William Johnston, national singles champion, defeated Norman Brookes, Australian star, in an exhibition match yesterday at the Berkeley Tennis Club courts, 6—4, 3—6, 6—4.

Gerald Patterson, Brookes' teammate, defeated Willis Davis, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4.

The Austrialians went down to defeat in a doubles match with Johnston and Maurice McLoughlin, former national singles champion, 7—5, 1—6, 6—3.

St. Paul Clinches Flag.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 22.—St. Paul yesterday won the American Association pennant by taking one game of a double-header here with Columbus. With a nine-game lead on Kansas City and the Blues having 10 games left to play, St. Paul could lose its remaining seven games and still win the season championship. If they lose their remaining seven games the St. Paul club will have won two more games and lost one more than Kansas City, in the event that the latter win all their remaining 10 games, giving the Saints the narrow margin of half a game clear lead for the title.

Women to Be Skippers.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Women will be skippers in a yacht race, Sept. 28, from the Jackson Park Yacht Club to the Casino Club pier. It is the second race of the kind in seven years and in the interim many expert women skippers have been developed. The race will be run under Lake Michigan Yachting Association rules.

Collins Brightest of World Series Stars

Hero of 5 Title Struggles Now at His Best

Sox Infielder Has Wonderful Championship Record

In Only One Year Did He Fail to Hit Close to .300 or Better; That Was Against the 1914 Braves.

EDDIE COLLINS, the greatest "money player" in baseball, with previous experience in several world's series, will be one of the main cogs for the White Sox in the coming clashes with the Cincinnati Reds. Collins, who this season has been playing better ball than at any time during his career, had stood out prominently in the big clashes in which he has participated.

However, when playing for extra money, Collins seems to exert his greatest efforts. This in the national pastime has gained him the title of "baseball's greatest money player." In only one set of games—with the Braves in 1914—did he fail in hitting. In the four clashes in which the Braves startled the baseball world by taking four straight, Collins hit only .214. In all his others he has done .286 or better.

Collins is the outstanding world's series veteran of the two teams. Collins has participated in five world's title clashes, to date, only one less than the renowned Jack Barry. In these five sets, Collins has been enriched by $14,523.52.

Collins played in his initial world's series in 1910, while a member of the Athletics. Against the Cubs' star pitchers, who at that time were rated as invincible, he made nine hits in 21 trips to the plate, an average of .429. He also stole four bases against Johnny Kling, one of the greatest catchers the pastime has ever produced.

Eddie Failed but Once.

AGAIN in 1911, Collins was one of the leaders for the Mackmen, with a batting mark of .286, while in 1913, he came back with a .421. His next was against the Braves, when he dropped to .214, but in 1917, when with the White Sox, he turned in a mark of .409 against the Giants' star pitchers—among them Harry Sallee the southpaw he will be called upon to face in the coming games.

EDDIE COLLINS.

Big Series Batting Record of Collins

WHAT Eddie Collins, captain of the White Sox, has done in five past world's series, facing some of the best pitchers the National League has had to offer is shown by the accompanying table of his batting record:

YEAR.	AB.	R.	H.	SH.	SB.	Ave.
1910	21	5	9	1	4	.429
1911	21	4	6	2	2	.286
1913	19	5	8	3	2	.421
1914	14	0	3	1	1	.214
1917	22	4	9	2	3	.409
	97	18	35	9	12	.361

On Several Occasions His Quick Wit Has Saved the Situation and in 1917 He Made Zim Pull His Famous Boner.

This season Collins owns a batting average better than .300, while in 1918, because of the unsettled conditions he fell below the select circle mark. He leads both leagues in stolen bases.

As an "inside ball player," Collins is ranked with the best of them. With the Sox this season he has more liberties than in 1918. Gleason figuring that Collins knew enough baseball has allowed him to follow his own course a great deal. With Rowland at the helm of the Sox in 1918, Collins was a bit dissatisfied. At least stories to this effect came out of the Windy City several times.

That Collins is one of the quickest thinkers in baseball was demonstrated in the 1917 world's series, when he fooled the "Great Zim" into chasing him from third across the plate with one of the tallies that beat the McGrawmen. Many in the baseball world are still gloating over this play.

Collins Still a Fine Fielder.

WHILE Collins may not be as fast as he was several years ago, he's still one of the greatest fielders in the game. He makes stops that look almost impossible and with the greatest ease. There is nothing really flashy about Collins—he just manages to get there for every ball.

As a batter he is still feared by all pitchers. He hits southpaws just as handily as righthanders and is a bad man to pitch to in a pinch. What's more Collins can wait out a flinger. He does not rap at anything that comes along, but splits a fraction of an inch with the opposing mound star.

Collins is field captain of the White Sox and he has made a good one. He's in there all the time, trying, and on the Sox' last visit to this city he showed more dash than he has for some time.

In the world's series in which Collins has participated, he drew his greatest share of money in 1911, when the Athletics' individual prize amounted to $3654.59. In the 1917 clashes between the White Sox and Giants he drew down $3528.13. Collins' world's series purses have been as follows:

YEAR.	Total.
1910	$ 2,062.79
1911	3,654.59
1913	3,246.36
1914	2,031,65
1917	3,528.13
TOTAL	$14,523.52

WRAY'S COLUMN

Pitching or Batting—Which Wins?

WHEN the well-known irresistible force encounters an impenetrable mass, scientists either throw up their hands and sanely give it up or retire to a padded apartment for life. The same alternative seems to threaten the boys who burn the midnight Keokuk kilowatts in the hope of being able to decide whether the Reds or the White Sox will win the world's series early next month.

For the problem presented by the two prospective opponents is briefly this: What will happen when an all-conquering attack meets an invincible defense?

You tell 'em, Bo—we can't.

The obvious, outstanding features connected with the rival teams are that—

The White Sox have a tremendous hitting and run-getting power.

The Reds own what is generally believed to be wonderful pitching strength.

As between the two, the man who can decide correctly and give real reasons for the same, is probably not on the map. One may luckily hit the truth; but the qualifying conditions are so many and of such varying importance that the only way of solving the problem is to reach into your pocket, take out a double eagle and toss the coin for an answer.

Even this course is barred to us—we haven't the double eagle.

Leave It to Addie Joss.

IF WE view this subject in the light of opinions expressed by the late Addie Joss, the Redlanders are already "IN." Addie was one of Cleveland's great pitchers, lang syne. He was also a philosopher. Neither interfered with his winter occupation as sport writer. In the last-named capacity he once made the statement that "pitching was 80 per cent of baseball."

If Addie was right it is far better to have unusual pitching strength than exceptional batting power.

Furthermore, world's series' history of past times in some respects bears him out. For, despite the possession of a wonderfully powerful attack and fair pitchers, the Detroit Tigers in three trials were unable to capture a single world's title.

On the other hand, we may cite in favor of hitting prowess, as opposed to pitching, that the White Sox of 1919 are winning the flag with practically only two first-string hurlers; while the great Mathewson, in 1912, hurled three masterly games against the Red Sox, but was unable to win a single contest.

Pitching a Passive Virtue.

AS BETWEEN pitching and hitting as a supreme factor in baseball, there is one noteworthy point, namely: That pitching is purely a DEFENSIVE merit and, even if perfectly executed, can guarantee nothing better than a drawn verdict.

On the other hand, the supreme PUNCH conceivably can, at times, batter out a victory, even with indifferent pitching support. In fact, these self-same Sox have done it many times this season.

Not only this, but in 1917 it happened during a world's series in TWO games, when the big sticks of the Sox battered down Schupp, the league's leading pitcher, and, later on, Sallee, after Slim's club had given him a lead of 4 to 1 as late as the sixth inning. The longer the series, the greater the chance that the war clubs of the Gleasonites will come into their own.

Aggressive virtues are always preferable to passive ones. And it is the prevailing popular belief that the Sox big sticks will batter down the defenses of even great hurlers.

STAPP TO BOX DEAN AT SOUTH BROADWAY

Charlie Stapp and Ora Dean, a pair of local welterweights, have been matched to box eight rounds in the semi-windup of the South Broadway A. C. show scheduled for tomorrow night. The weight agreement is 144 pounds. Dean's last local bout resulted in his being knocked out by Fred Nelson.

Bobby Hughes, who meets Babe Asher in the main bout, went through a long workout at the South Side Club yesterday. He boxed with Eddie Meier and Jimmy Murphy.

A preliminary contest will be arranged today by Matchmaker Harry Uhlemeyer.

HOT SUN NECESSARY TO PUT TENNIS COURTS IN SHAPE FOR AUSTRALIANS

Although the Triple A courts were soaked by yesterday's rains, it was announced that a warm sun during the forenoon would put them in shape for the exhibition matches, postponed from Saturday and yesterday.

Lycett and Thomas, the members of the Australian team, consented to remain in the city today and tomorrow in order that the scheduled matches might be played. Today they will probably meet Jostles and Drewes in a doubles match, while their singles contests will be held tomorrow.

The Tennis Committee did not announce whether the final contest for the city doubles championship would be held today or tomorrow. Brown and Haase meet Schwarz and Reppert for the title.

MUNICIPAL NINES WILL PLAY MID-WEEK GAMES

With the second game of the Municipal Baseball Association championship series between the Wagners of the Mercantile League and St. Louis Screw Co. of the Independent scheduled for yesterday being postponed because of rain, the teams will probably meet in a double-header Wednesday to decide the title winner.

A meetin of the municipal officials will probably be held today to decide this question.

It will be impossible to stage the games later, as out-of-town champions are scheduled to show here next Saturday and Sunday.

SHREVEPORT WILL PLAY FORT WORTH FOR FLAG

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 22.—Four double-headers yesterday closed the 1919 Texas League season, with the championship to be decided in a series of post-season games between the Fort Worth and Shreveport teams. This was made necessary by a division of the schedule on July 1, when Shreveport, the leading team, was given first honors.

The second half of the schedule resulted in a close race between Houston and Fort Worth, with Fort Worth holding the lead most of the way and finally clinching it. Houston held second place at the end, Dallas third and Beaumont fourth.

Billiken Gridiron Squad Will Start Practice Today

Rademacher Sends Out Urgent Call to Dental and Medical Candidates for Team.

Every medical and dental student who attends St. Louis University and has football possibilities received a letter from Billiken headquarters this morning with orders to report post haste to Sportsman's Park.

Practice will be started at Grand and Dodier at 3 o'clock this afternoon, but as classes are not scheduled to call the "Dents" and "Medics" together until Oct. 1, Coach Rademacher fears that he will be delayed in getting down to actual work. Rademacher recalls with uneasiness the situation in 1917, when his squad straggled to work during the second and third weeks of October and the team did not "get going" until just before the Washington game.

He also notes with discomfiture that Dick Rutherford is holding two practice sessions daily at Francis Field and the Pikers will play their first game Saturday. Marquette University, the Billikens' other big rival this season, started work on Sept. 8.

Plenty of Line Material.

A wealth of line material is expected on the squad, but unless some husky backs materialize, it looks like the blue and white will have to depend upon a pony offensive. Baker, a fullback of two years ago, is the only big piece of backfield material expected to return. Murphy, Harold Connors, Hart, Lynch, Diethelm, Durbin and Thornton are fast men, but all of them are lacking in poundage.

From present indications, the line should be heavy in both weight and experience. Rademacher will be able to put a line on the field composed virtually of veterans. Capt. Meinhart, Kotkis, Dennis, Strubinger, Gallagher, O'Donnell, Donovan and Strubinger form about as promising a set of forwards as any coach might desire. Then Highthouse, a 195-pound recruit, should be heard of before the varsity is selected.

Jack Connors will assist Rademacher in coaching the team. Connors was captain under the former Chicago U. star in 1917.

Soldan Meets Maplewood.

The first interscholastic game of the season will be played tomorrow afternoon on Junior High School Field, when Soldan meets Maplewood High. The Union avenue players should have no trouble with the county team, as they will carry a large weight advantage.

Webster to Play in Alton.

Next Saturdays' big "prep" game will bring together the Webster High and Western Military Academy elevens on the latter team's campus at Upper Alton. Coach Roberts' squad showed unusual strength in Saturday's tilt with the alumni, winning 14 to 0. Webster will meet a local High School League team for the first time when it hooks up with Yeatman on Oct. 4.

Leffler Shows Old Speed.

One of the outstanding stars in the Central-Alumni game, Saturday, was Dean Leffler, the former McKinley High player who was drafted to a halfback position on the Central "grad" team. Leffler had a rather poor season at Great Lakes last year, but now seems to be playing in his 1917 form. He got away to two long runs, and consistently punctured the midcity line for gains. He will be a member of the Washington University freshman team this season.

Geraghty on Hospital List.

Coach Dan Savage of the St. Louis University High School forces lost one of his players for about two weeks, when Geraghty suffered a fractured collar bone in Saturday's scrimmage. Geraghty has been one of his most promising men, and the loss will cripple the Billiken juniors.

Eber Simpson, Rutherford's assistant, will arrive to take charge of the W. U. freshman tomorrow. A number of the "frosh" have reported for practice, but have had to be satisfied with watching the varsity.

CARDINALS AND CUBS SCHEDULED TO START 3-GAME SERIES TODAY

The Cardinals and Chicago Cubs will open a three-game series at Cardinal Field this afternoon, weather permitting. A double bill is scheduled for tomorrow, after which the Knot-Holers enjoy two open dates before tackling the Pirates in the final clashes of the campaign starting Friday. Bill Doak will likely pitch for the Rickeymen today, opposed by Claude Hendrix.

Yesterday's scheduled double-header with the Philies was washed away by the rain, making three postponements in two days. These clashes will have to go unplayed, as the two do not meet again.

Two exhibition games have been arranged by the Cardinal management. The Mount Vernon carbuilders will be tackled at Mount Vernon, Ill., Wednesday, while Quincy, Ill., will be opposed Thursday.

Cincy on the Rhine.

A ROOTER of the Legion was shedding bitter tears,
There was lack of joyous chatter and a dearth of rousing cheers.
He'd been a royal rooter back in 1869,
For he was born at Cincy, fair Cincy-on-the-Rhine.

He'd never missed a frolic of the Cincinnati clan,
And cheered for every leader from George Wright to Pat Moran.
And when the gates were opened he would be there, rain or shine,
For he was born at Cincy, fair Cincy-on-the-Rhine.

At last his husky heroes with the pennant stowed away
Were making preparations for the great world's series fray.
To see aforesaid series he most earnestly did pine
For he was born at Cincy, fair Cincy-on-the-Rhine.

A comrade stood beside him as he told his tale of woe;
Said he: "To see the series I've been saving up my dough.
But when I bought a ticket, I was surely handed mine,
For I was born at Cincy, fair Cincy-on-the-Rhine.

"They raised the price of ducats like a bunch of profiteers,
For past and future losses they were making up arrears;
For hours and for hours I was forced to stand in line
For I was born at Cincy, fair Cincy-on-the-Rhine.

"Take a message to old Garry of the Cincinnati crew
And tell him I was for him, but, I'm positivly through;
Next year to be patron I most earnestly decline
For I was born at Cincy, fair Cincy-on-the-Rhine."

Quite True.

But don't worry. The old boy will bob up serenely at the opening game in the spring as usual. The recollection of that old pennant will remain long after the the price of a world's series ticket is forgotten.

If you don't believe it look at Chicago. In the fall of 1917 the local fans were off Comiskey for life. But did they come back? We'll say they did.

The man on the sand box says the next move of the League of Nations will be to fire Bullitt.

* * *

Rogers Hornsby wasted a perfectly good home run in the left field bleachers. As it did the Cardinals no good and Babe Ruth needs every home run he can get he might as well have let George do it.

Watch 'Em Next Year.

Connie Mack's Atlanta pennant winners are ripping the A. L. wide open. However they can hardly catch the White Sox this year.

One of the most noted "come backs" of the current year is our old friend the Veiled Prophet. If he shows up in time we'll get our usual dope on the world's series.

Champion Woman Golfer Here for Practice Workout

Miss Alexa Stirling Tuning Up at Country Club for Title Event.

Miss Alexa Stirling, national champion woman golfer, is a guest of the St. Louis Country Club, where she is at present practicing over the club's golf course under the eye of the instructor who developed her at Atlanta, Ga., Stewart Maiden.

Miss Stirling is the youngest player to hold the national title, having won the title in 1916 when not 18 years old. The tournament has been suspended since that time, but is being revived this year at Philadelphia. Miss Stirling will depart next Wednesday to defend her honors.

Some months ago it was stated that she probably would not defend her title, but her trip here to prepare for the event is evidence of her changed intention. She has not been playing in her best form, but hopes to "get on her game" before Saturday.

Maiden developed Miss Stirling and "Bobby" Jones while he was professional at an Atlanta club. Jones, like Miss Stirling, came to St. Louis for a workout with his former instructor, just before the national championship, in which he was a finalist, losing to Davidson Herron in the title round.

HUTCHINSON IS WINNER IN MATCH WITH BARNES

ISLIP, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Jock Hutchison settled old scores by defeating Jim Barnes, Western and professional golf champion, in a 36 match over two courses here yesterday. Hutchison won by 2 up and 1 to play, and also returned the best 18-hole score at the St. George's links in the afternoon, while Barnes had the best card in the morning over the Westbrook Golf Club links, each making a 77.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 22.—The Cordoza team of St. Paul, Minn., yesterday won the championship of the Western section of the National Amateur Baseball Association by defeating the Lincoln-Cleaners in the deciding game by a score of 1 to 0. Chell, the Cordoza pitcher, held the Cleaners to a single hit.

TALKS about everything the live man is interested in—Grantland Rice on queer kinks of the links—Major Reed Landis on a separate air service—George Sutton on the new Aero Clubs—a French ace's impressions of New York—the latest types of peace motor boat—the new closed cars—Rukeyser on money and Thomas Lamont on the man shortage.

THERE'S plenty of Broadway, too, from George Cohan as a strikebreaker to Theda Bara as a converted vamp, with sidelights on the Greenwich Village Follies, a Cubist production of Salomé, and Professor Baker of Harvard as a reason for the infant mortality among American dramatists.

STEPHEN LEACOCK on the social unrest—P. G. Wodehouse on the new dance steps—Robert Benchley on the housing problem—and as for unconventional pictures, there's Commissioner of Immigration Frank C. Howe in a bathing suit, Cartoonist Briggs in bed, and Ruth St. Denis pretty much as usual. Fish contributes sketches on the concert lizard, and Wodehouse obliges with a poem on his dress tie.

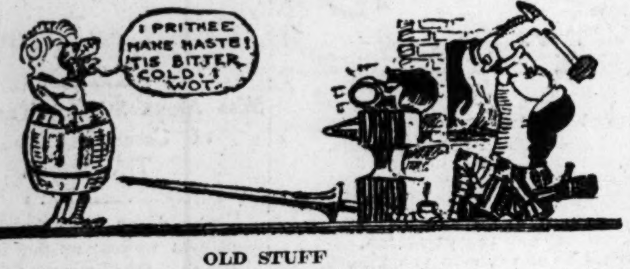
MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

By James J. Montague.



I PRITHEE MAKE HASTE! 'TIS BITTER COLD! WOT.

OLD STUFF

(Mark Sullivan, journalist and philosopher, says the way to keep the cost of living down is to have one's clothing turned when it is worn.)

When Lancelot's steel suit got mussed
  And all the girls of Astolat
Exclaimed, in accents of disgust
  "No proper knight would dress like that!"
The blacksmith turned it inside out
  And after that the maids would smile
And murmur, as he walked about,
  "Ain't Lancelot a bear for style?"

Ben Franklin, all the summer through,
  Arrayed himself in rabbit skin,
But when the winds of winter blew
  He wisely turned the outside in.
Fine raiment did not dissipate
  The savings of this frugal lad,
For, 'till he grew to man's estate
  One suit of clothes was all he had.

Ourselves, when young, did not frequent
  The tailor's or the clothing store,
But little wealth our father spent
  Upon the raiment that we wore.
He squandered nothing to enrich
  The coffers of the profiteer.
We had one suit of homespun, which
  Our mother turned three times a year.

We'll follow your suggestion, Mark,
  We'll wear our clothes until the day
When, as we're walking in the park,
  They vanish, like the one-hoss shay.
The profiteers have got too rough
  And need to learn a thing or two,
But, Mark, that inside-outside stuff
  Did not originate with you!

The plan for a new dam across the Ohio grew out of the news that the contents of most of the Kentucky distilleries have been emptied into it.

Wife: How do you like your new radium watch, dear?

Husband: It would be wonderful if I did not have to light the lamp every time to find my glasses.—New York Evening Post.

His Excuse.

Our little boy was sent to the store by his mother for a half dozen eggs and some sugar, relates a contributor to the Chicago Tribune. When he returned his mother discovered he had brought the sugar, but instead of the eggs he had bought lemons.

She asked, "Didn't I tell you to bring eggs and sugar?"

"Yes, you did, mother," answered the little fellow, "but I was afraid the eggs would break, so I got some lemons."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.
